Some Towns Cut Off As Lines Go Down; Roads Dangerous In Pa., N. Y. State

By The Associated Press

Destructive tornados and damaging ice and snow storms marred New Year's debut in wide sections of the country yesterday.

Excessive rains accompanied by freezing temperatures brought severe ice storms, and later heavy snows New Year's Day to sections of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Michigan, disrupting communication and power lines, toppling radio transmitter towers and causing damage estimated in the millions.

In the East, rain helped clear New York streets of its record 25.8-inch snowfall of last Friday, but freezing temperatures followed and the Weather Bureau warned that by midnight highways from Pennsylvania to Massachusetts probably would be covered with ice.

Sand on Roads Freezes

Police urged motorists to stay off the roads as ice formed earlier in the day in southeastern New York State. Sand thrown on highways provided only temporary relief, police said, as more moisture froze over the sand.

The Weather Bureau said the freezing rain was preceding the advance of a "deep storm center" from the lower Ohio Valley toward New England.

At New York City's LaGuardia Field, icy runways halted air travel. Railway travel was virtually back to normal.

City officials said freezing weather would deter them from reaching the goal of all city streets cleared by Friday.

A ban on nonessential trucking will be lifted tomorrow, but an embargo against private use of private autos in the city will continue until further notice.

Chicago and northern Illinois suffered heavily in the Midwestern area as high winds and freezing rain toppled at least five radio transmitter towers, knocked down telephone lines, shattered windows throughout Chicago and coated the city's streets with an icy sheet that crippled transportation facilities.

Communities Isolated

The Illinois Bell Telephone Co. estimated it had suffered at least one million dollars damage to its lines and equipment. A company spokesman said the entire staff of more than 1000 maintenance men had been summoned to emergency duty. At least a score of Illinois cities were isolated by shattered telephone lines.

Rochester, Ind., was without power for three hours due to ice on transmission and distribution lines and sections of Wabash, Huntington and South Bend, Ind., also were without electricity for periods.

Some 30 eastern Iowa communities, including Clinton, Burlington, Fort Madison and Keokuk, were cut off from long-distance telephone service when winds up to 48 miles an hour snapped ice-coated lines. Some southern sections of Iowa had up to 6 inches of snow.

In Ohio, Bowling Green (population 8000) was nearly isolated by sleet and snow.

Holes in Ground Used to Launch New Army Rockets

Rockets fired from holes in the ground have been used to lay telephone wire in Signal Corps experiments, the Army Department said yesterday.

Ordinarily, the Army said, the wire would be carried by rockets fired from launchers. A new type rocket, however, can be fired from a hole dug in the earth and will carry wire as far as 150 yards.

A new wire dispenser also has been developed, the Army said, which makes use of coils unnecessary. Wire is packed in these dispensers in half-mile lengths and weighs only 48 pounds per mile.

Sheriff Flushes Slayer Suspect From Train

Man Admits Killing Motorist But Says He Isn't Escaped Convict

Hot Sulphur Springs, Colo., Jan. 1 (AP).—A passenger-train trap for an escaped convict tonight flushed a man who admitted, Sheriff Chester Mcueary said, killing a motorist earlier today. The officers failed to catch their expected quarry—a killer on the loose since a State prison break last Tuesday night.

Denver police, who had announced the hitchhike slayer was James B. Sherbondy, 29-year-old escaped killer, had set an elaborate traps for the fugitive believed to be fleeing aboard a train.

A posse of sharpshooters boarded the train at nearby Granby— ready to seize Sherbondy and end a three-day hunt for the last of 12 convicts who fled from the Staate penitentiary at Cannon City Tuesday.

But the man they snatched from the train was not Sherbondy. McQueary said the captured man identified himself as Don Tucker, 25, Peru, Ind., and admitted killing California motorist Robert Hutchings, 22, and shooting Hutchins' 20-year-old wife, earlier today near Castle Rock, Colo.

When the slayer wrecked the Hutchins car in Denver today and fled, Denver police said the killer was the much-sought escaped convict.

Officers said Mrs. Hutchins, lying critically wounded in a Denver hospital mumbled a description of her huband's slayer that convinced them he was Sherbondy.

The hitchhiker was picked up by Hutchins in the south-central Colorado area where Sherbondy had been hunted. A taxicab driver who picked up the man who fled from the Hutchins' car said he had bought clothes from a downtown store and had changed from "prisontype" garb.

After the change, the alleged ordered the cabbie to drive him to Denver's Union Station, where he bought a ticket on the west-bound Denver & Rio Grande train from which he was removed several hours later here.

The gun-bristling posse which boarded the train had prepared for a battle with the man they believed to be Sherbondy. Instead, the man was taken without a shot being fired.

"Tucker never had a change," McQueary said, "we took him by surprise and he surrendered weakly."

He had a .38 revolver in his possession, the Sheriff said.

McQueary said Tucker told of tossing the young motorist's body alongside a country road five miles south of Castle Rock

Five States Hit By Winds; Many Homeless in Area

Shreveport, La., Jan. 1 (AP).—Twenty persons were dead, scores injured and hundreds homeless tonight, the toll exacted by tornados which skipped furiously over five Southern States as the old year expired.

For the homeless, the night was a bitter one. A cold wave creeping down from the north brought temperatures of 24 to 28 degrees to add to misery wrought earlier by rain, snow, sleet and strong winds.

A Red Cross recapitulation tonight listed 250 injured, 245 homes destroyed and 290 damaged in the five States—Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama.

Cotton Valley, La., worst hit of the towns and communities, counted 12 dead, with rescue workers still probing amid the rubble for other possible victims.

Million in Damage

In addition, a Cotton Valley contractor, G. E. Speed, estimated property damage in that town of 1500 at one million dollars.

The confirmed death toll in Louisiana was 15; 2 in Tennessee, 2 in Arkansas and 1 in Mississippi. None was reported killed in Alabama.

To assist survivors in rebuilding and to provide immediate relief, Red Cross President aBsil O'Connor announced in Washington an initial fund of $100,000 had been set aside and that more money would be available as needed.

Two new tornadoes struck at Kociusko and Mantee, Miss., today. Houses were demolished and one man was killed in Mantee. Dwellings also were tumbled in Montgomery, Ala.

Urges Federal Help

Representative Brooks (D., La.) urged President Truman to lend Federal assistance to stricken communities in the northwestern Louisiana and southwestern Arkansas cotton belt.

Special trains brought boxcars to house the homeless, estimated by Mayor Sam Coyle at 500 in Cotton Valley alone. Mayor Coyle said 200 were injured. Air Force flew in tents, cots and bedding, and medical supplies.

Three children in a single family were killed near Memphis, Tenn., when a twister demolished a farm home.

Single fatalities from New Year's Eve tornadoes were recorded in Leton, Dykesville and Haynesville, La., and Altheimer and Village, Ark.

Two grim tales of death came out of Cotton Valley, where fewer than 100 buildings remained standing.

The mother of seven children, Mrs. Hugh Clayton, said her husband died in her arms, pierced by a 3-foot length of timber, and res-

A 22-year-old nurse who was injured in a crash while en route to a New Year's Eve party died at Casualty Hospital at 6:12 p. m. yesterday—the first District traffic victim of the new year.

She was Betty Lou Parcell of 2314 19th st. nw., a registered nurse at St. Elizabeths Hospital. Her injuries included a brain hemhorrage, a skull fracture and head lacerations. She came here about four months ago from Rainelle, W. Va.

The fatal crash occurred at 11:30 p. m. at Nichols ave. and S. Capitol st. Police said Miss Parcell was a passenger in a car driven by Dr. Arnold Namrow, also of St. Elizabeths Hospital, and that Dr. Namrow's car was struck, headon, by a truck operated by Gordon Mumford, 20, of 1526 Good Hope rd. se.

Dr. Namrow, who was escorting the young nurse to a party, was also taken to Casualty Hospital in serious condition, suffering from concussion, body contusions and face lacerations.

Mumford, who was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a lacerated lip and possible rib fracture, was charged with drunken driving and failing to yield the right of way.

The first traffic death in 1947 did not occur until January 11.

'Crushing Defeat' Inflicted on Reds, General Staff Says; Guerillas Retreat

Athens, Jan. 1 (AP).—The Greek general staff said tonight the Army had inflicted a "crushing defeat" on "Communist forces" in the battle of Konitsa, where a seven-day guerilla siege was lifted today.

On Christmas Eve, the day before the battle began, Communist Leader Markos Vafiades proclaimed a Greek Communist government. The offensive against Konitsa, some 5 miles below the Albanian border, was believed aimed at capture of a capital for this government.

The general staff said one column of troops entered Konitsa yesterday but a second relief column still was held up tonight at the Bourozani bridge across the rain-swollen Aoos River, 11 miles west of Konitsa.

Guerillas in Retreat

Earlier, War Minister George Stratos said the guerillas were in retreat toward a stronghold in the Grammos Mountains. He said they had dynamited the bridge.

The general staff revealed that on the first day the Konitsa garrison was "completely isolated to a considerable depth."

The defenders were about 900 men, against more than 3000, the communique said. Other sources estimated guerillas in the vicinity at 10,000.

Stratos said the relief column drove into Konitsa in a torrential rain in a series of bayonet charges.

An informant said the Konista offensive was directed by a "Balkan staff," consisting of Russian, Yugoslav and Bulgarian officers with headquarters at Skoplje, Yugoslavia.

Second Red Failure

Stratos confirmed that Konista was safely in the hands of Athens government forces. The Communist failure was the second on the same battlefield within the last six months.

(The Leftist Greek New Agency distributed in London a New Year's message broadcast by Vafiades predicting that 1948 "will be a year of victory" for the Communist-led guerillas.

23 Sub-Chasers Go on Sale by Lot At $1500 Apiece

Baltimore, Jan. 1 (AP).—The United States Maritime Commission put a $1500 price tag each on 23 war surplus subchasers at the Curtis Bay Coast Guard depot today and offered them for sale.

With a heavy demand anticipated, the commission announced that a public drawing would be held January 8 among prospective purchasers to even the opportunity to buy.

The vessels are twin-screw wooden craft built during 1942 and 1943 to Navy specifications. They are 110 feet long with an 18-foot beam and draw 5½ feet of water. Estimated displacement is 85 tons.

All will be sold on an "as is, where is" basis. Purchase offers will be received by the small vessels division of the Commerce Department in Washington until the close of business January 5.

Marshall Plan Passage Before June Unlikely

Eaton Sees Possibility Of Two-Month Delay Beyond April 1 Mark

By The Associated Press

Congress action on the Marshall Plan may be delayed two months beyond the Administration's April 1 deadline, Representative Eaton (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, predicted yesterday.

"I wouldn't set any date," Eaton told reporters. "But if we get it through by June 1 we'll be fortunate."

And he made it clear that he was not speaking of passing the plan in exactly the pattern cut by the Administration, but as it finally evolves after careful hearings and any necessary revisions.

Eaton said he did not even intend to follow the practice of introducing the Administration's Marshall Plan bill to get it formally before his committee.

"This is the most important legislation that has come before the House, in my judgment, in my time," he said. "It cannot be treated in a perfunctory, routine manner."

Plans "Proper Study" of Plan

The bill President Truman submitted to Congress would authorize the spending of 17 billion dollars in the 4¼ years beginning April 1 to help bring about economic recovery in western Europe. The program would be handled by a single administrator with broad powers.

A special House committee headed by Representative Herter (R., Mass.), which went to Europe last fall, has recommended unanimously a bill which would turn the program over to an independent Government corporation with a bipartisan eight-man board of directors.

"I wouldn't care to sponsor the State Department or any other bill

Jews Enter Promised Land By Hundreds

Passengers Wade in From Grounded Ship; 10 Deaths During Day

Jerusalem, Jan. 1 (AP).—A mass attempt to break the Palestine blockade partially succeeded today when between 500 and 700 Jewish immigrants waded ashore from a beached ship while the British were busy herding more than 11,000 passengers from two other vessels into Cyprus detention camps.

Inside the Holy Land Jews and Arabs continued sporadic gunplay. In this first day of the new year four Jews, 11 Arabs, a German and a Pole lost their lives, bringing to 507 the unofficial death toll since the United Nations voted five weeks ago to partition Palestine.

There was one report, without official confirmation, that at least 40 Arabs were killed during the day.

700 Reported Ashore

The ship which beat the British naval patrol ran aground at Nahariya, at the extreme northern end of the Palestine coast. Hagana, the Jewish defense organization, said all 700 Jews aboard this ship now were inside the "Promised Land."

Troops of the British Sixth Airborne Division sped to the scene and held 200 Jews under guard along the beach. Hagana claimed the uncertified immigrants had gotten safely out of reach and that the British soldiers merely had rounded up residents of the Nahariya area.

Meanwhile, hundreds of British commandos, garrison troops and civil policemen lined the docks at Famagusta, Cyprus, as more than 11,000 other uncertified Jewish immigrants filed quietly off their converted cargo ships, the Pan Crescent and Pan York.

Those two vessels were inter-

13 Travelers Are Killed In Collision Of 2 Trains

Mrs. A. W. Weddell, Wife of Former Envoy to Spain, Is Believed Dead

Otterville, Mo., Jan. 1 (AP).—At least 13 holiday travelers, one tentatively identified as the wife of former Ambassador to Spain Alexander W. Weddell, were killed today in a rear-end crash of two Missouri Pacific passenger trains in a blinding snowstorm near here.

A State highway patrolman, Lieut. K. K. Johnson, said a bracelet with Mrs. Weddell's name and carrying the inscription "State Department, Washington, D. C.," was found on one of the 12 bodies removed from the wreckage. Her husband was believed to be aboard the train but he could not be located immediately.

Johnson also reported a traveling bag bearing the word "Ambassador" was found near the woman's body.

In Richmond, Va., it was reported that Mrs. Weddell was en route to Tucson, Ariz., with her husband. Also with them was Mrs. Weddell's maid, Violet Andrews.

Friends of the family said Mrs.

ALEXANDER W. WEDDELL

Weddell, a native of Texas, had been in ill health for some time and planned to stay Tucson for "several months" on doctors' orders.

The Weddells had been living in Richmond since Weddell resigned as ambassador to Spain shortly after the close of World War II.

Removal of the bodies in the subfreezing weather was difficult and nightfall added to the difficulties. State Highway patrolmen said two or three more bodies may be found in a telescoped Pullman car.

One of the injured died in a hospital at nearby Sedalia, making the known toll 13 and leaving the possibility that it may reach 16.

The locomotive of the second section of the train rammed through all but 4 feet of the rear Pullman of the first section, cramming it together like a giant steel accordion. All traffic had to be rerouted, and trainmen indicated it would still be hours before the tracks could be cleared.

Part of the wreckage was cut away by blow torches before the Pullman could be separated from the locomotive by a bulldozer. Late in the afternoon State highway patrolmen said rescue work had been slowed by the crushed

Army to Reenlist GIs Until They Can Get in College

Soldiers eligible for college training under the GI Bill but unable to enter overcrowded colleges will be permitted to reenlist in the Army or Air Force until they can be accepted as students.

The Army Department said yesterday those men whose enlistments are about to expire but who are unable to take advantage of GI schooling may extend their enlistments to three, four or five years "with the promise that they will be discharged at any time subsequent to completion of their original term of enlistments in order to use their educational benefits." Discharge will be granted, the Army said, when the soldier presents a letter from a college official stating that he has been accepted for enrollment.

Year May See End of Chest

Welfare Situation Appears Grim for Washington in 1948

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

It doesn't take any crystal ball to know that things will be grim in the welfare field in Washington in 1948.

Just how grim, no one knows.

Community Chest officials are trying desperately to find more money to meet the needs of private welfare. There is talk, rising in volume, that 1948 may see the end of the Community Chest in Washington and a return to solicitation by individual social agencies.

An apathetic public turned thumbs down on the Chest's plea to oversubscribe its $3,900,000 and the quota is still about 15 per cent short.

On the public welfare front, the situation is equally tense. Last August, the Department of Public Welfare tightened its regulations to eliminate some of its clients rather than slice 10 per cent from all relief checks.

Although the 1949 fiscal year budget has not yet been released, it is expected that welfare funds for general public assistance for the 1949 fiscal year certainly will not go above 1948 levels. For Congress habitually uses a butcher knife on welfare funds for the District of Columbia, and there is no indication of a change of the legislative heart.

In terms of simple arithmetic,

Damage Award Set Aside

U. S. Judge Rules Segregation On Public Carriers Is Legal

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—Federal Judge John Paul has ruled that a public carrier has the right to establish its own rules providing for the separate seating of white and Negro passengers where such separation is in line with local custom.

The District Court jurist held in a written opinion that neither Congress nor its agent—the Interstate Commerce Commission—had ever attempted to regulate or control a carrier's rights to seat passengers as it saw fit. He noted that Congress had consistently refused to enact legislation which would ban segregation.

Judge Paul's opinion, just received at court here, was a ruling in favor of a bus company in the case of William I. Simmons, a Negro clergyman vs. Atlantic Greyhound Corp. The order directed a verdict in favor of the company, thus setting aside the $25 damages awarded by a jury to Simmons in his suit for $20,000 damages.

The suit was brought as a test of rules set up by the bus company providing for separate seating after a Virginia statute covering segregation of races in public carriers had been declared unconstitutional.

The facts, as set forth in the suit, were that Simmons boarded a Greyhound bus at Roanoke on October 16, 1946, to travel to Salisbury, N. C., to attend a meeting of his church synod. He took a seat near the front and was asked by the driver to move to the rear. He refused, left the bus and his ticket was returned to him.

Simmons said his rights under the Fourteenth Amendment had been violated.

The clergyman's allegation that his constitutional rights had been abridged was based on "indefinite" and "uncertain" grounds, Judge Paul said, and he noted that Simmons claimed no violent or abusive treatment.

He added that the Simmons case was evidently inspired by the case of Morgan against the State of Virginia, in which a State statute requiring the segregation of white and colored passengers on motor vehicle carriers was held to be invalid when applied to interstate commerce passengers.

The Morgan case, he pointed out, rested solely on the commerce clause of the Constitution not on the Fourteenth Amendment or the Civil Rights Act.

[In a case decided June 3, 1946, the United States Supreme Court declared unconstitutional a State law requiring segregation on interstate buses, for the reason that such segregation would be an "undue burden" on interstate commerce.

[In that case, a Negro woman, Irene Morgan, was fined $10 in Middlesex County (Virginia) Circuit Court for refusing to change seats on a Greyhound bus on request of the driver, while en route from Norfolk, Va., to Baltimore, Md.

[The court said in that case: "As there is no Federal act dealing with the separation of races in interstate transportation we must decide the validity of this Virginia statute on

Details Still Hush-Hush

Plans Reported for Balcony On South Side of White House

Carefully guarded plans are in preparation for the addition of a presidential balcony to the south side of the White House.

William A. Delano, New York architect, is scheduled to come to Washington today to discuss the project, which reportedly had its inception when President Truman saw a balcony he fancied during recent travels.

Beyond confirming that such a project is being worked on and is in its initial stages, Delano had no further comment when reached by long-distance telephone.

Several members of the Commission of Fine Arts, which has the final say on any project involving historic national property, likewise confirmed that President Truman hopes to get a balcony but they would not discuss details of the plan. They referred inquiries to Gilmore D. Clarke of New York City, commission chairman, who could not be reached for comment.

H. P. Caemmerer, secretary and administrative officer of the Commission, declined comment on the ground it was "a White House matter."

It was reported in other circles that the balcony is to be built at the second-floor living quarters level of the White House.

Some reports pictured the addition as a semi-circular structure nestled high among the half-circle of majestic white ionic columns which give the historic first mansion its classical appearance when viewed from across the Ellipse.

the definite cut in private welfare funds and the expected cut in public welfare funds is going to widen the number of the needy who will not be reached by public or private welfare.

And what is going to happen to those people? That's one of the big question marks for the new year. Some sociological experts believe the public's apathy to welfare needs is going to be rewarded with a substantial increase in crime and disease. And if District employment levels go down in 1948, the area of the needy will become correspondingly larger.

These are surface indications of things to come. But there are other things in the welfare wind.

So far as public welfare is concerned, 1948 probably will see a decision on whether the Board of Public Welfare shall be granted autonomy, or shall be made purely an advisory body.

The Welfare Board is seeking extra powers, which would enable it to control public welfare as the Board of Education controls schools, with the necessity only of submitting its budget to the District Commissioners for approval.

The Commissioners are seeking a change of welfare policy which would see welfare operations handled by a department of the District government, responsible to the Commissioners. The Welfare Board would be relegated to a purely advisory body under this system.

Hearings on the advisory board plan have been completed in the House of Representatives and are expected to be held in the Senate during 1948. Feeling of the House side appeared to be that the advisory board plan probably is the more feasible.

Fate of Children's Center

Fate of the Children's Center at Laurel, Md. probably also will be decided by Congress in the coming year. And it will be up to the District Commissioners to name a successor to Ray L. Huff, Welfare Department director, who died last month.

The Commissioners will act on the recommendation of the Board of Welfare, which will suggest a successor. The Commissioners have no power to submit a name for the post, but may reject the board's suggestions if they so elect.

Edgar L. Morris, chairman of the Welfare Board, said yesterday he expected a nomination probably would be sent to the Commissioners "within the next two months." So far no speculation on a possible choice for the job has reached the board, Morris said.

In the private welfare field, 1948 is going to be a controversial year. The outline of this controversy, so far as administration of private welfare goes, was visible at the meeting on December 30 of the board of directors of the Community Chest.

F. Elton Rogers, chairman of the Chest's budget committee, had explained to the directors that the appropriation for the Washington Chest has been divided as follows:

Forty-two per cent to the 19 agencies known as family and child welfare division, 31 per cent to the 20 agencies in the recreation or character-building division, 17 per cent to the 10 agencies and two funds in the health division, and 10 per cent to the 10 agencies in the miscellaneous division.

Several agency heads objected to the nearly 50 per cent allotment to family and child welfare agencies. Among these were Leonard W. DeGast, general secretary of the YMCA, who suggested that it was the Government's province to take care of relief cases.

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Social Hygiene Society, asked "Is the Community Chest increasing its subsidy to the Board of Public Welfare? Are we paying more and more expenses which should be borne by public agencies?"

But as long as the Public Welfare Department is forced annually either to tighten its admitting regulations or cut its relief grants, this question will continue to be asked by private welfare agencies.

Shall Agencies Seek Funds

And there is another question in the forefront of the minds of the agency heads. It was expressed by Hyman Goldman, a representative of the Jewish Community Center, at the Community Chest board of directors meeting:

"I can't possibly see how agencies can maintain their services and retain their staff without breaking down in the middle. I don't see why agencies which have depended year after year on the subsidy from the Chest should suffer when they can go out and get enough money to maintain their standards of service. I think agencies should be permitted to raise money in order to maintain their organizations."

While the Community Chest campaign was still on, and it already had become apparent that the drive would not reach its goal, one Community Chest agency head told The Washington Post:

"It might be a good thing if the Community Chest collapsed. Maybe then, the people in this Nation's Capital of ours would see what the Chest has been doing. Maybe, when they saw enough panhandling, and had their children assaulted by the jobless, and had their stores broken into by the hungry, they would be more in the mood to give to the Community Chest, instead of paying taxes when the crime rate goes up."

Senate Probers Fix Deadline On Monday for Pauley Data

Speculation Records Promised to Senate Group Still Awaited

By the United Press

Senate investigators yesterday fixed an unofficial deadline of Monday for Edwin W. Pauley to produce his personal records on commodity market speculation.

Pauley, Special Assistant to the Secretary of Army, has been listed by the Agriculture Department as having large speculative holdings in grain, cottonseed oil and other commodity futures last October 31.

The wealthy California oil man told the Senate Appropriations Committee on December 12 that he disposed of his market holdings as rapidly as possible after taking the high Federal post, even at the sacrifice of potential profits.

He promised to let the committee examine his private books to substantiate his claim that he never used his official position in any way to get inside tips on Government purchases that caused the market to go up.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee investigating commodity speculation by Government officials, sent Pauley a letter December 21 urging him to hurry up with the preparation of his records for Senate inspection.

Pauley, who was at his Los Angeles home for the holidays, replied that "the information is being assembled and will be 'forwarded to you as promptly as possible."

He pointed out that the Senators "did not specify any particular deadline" when they asked him to open his books.

A Senate source disclosed yesterday, however, that subcommittee members have decided that Monday, January 5, would be an appropriate deadline. Unless Pauley voluntarily produces his records by the time Congress reconvenes Tuesday morning, this source indicated, the subcommittee may slap a supena on him.

The Agriculture Department, publishing lists of market speculators in compliance with a Senate subpena, revealed this week that Brig. Gen. Wallace Graham, President Truman's personal physician, was in the grain market last September.

Graham told reporters that he disposed of his grain holdings on October 7, two days after President Truman publicly denounced "gamblers in grain." He said he had not previously been aware that he had grain holdings, because he had left it up to his broker's discretion to invest his funds.

"I lost my socks," Graham said of his hurried exit from the market.

The Senate subcommittee asked Graham's brokerage firm, Bache & Co., for full details of the doctor's account. The company, which contends that all transactions in Graham's name were "made on his instructions," indicated the information might be submitted today.

Traffic Deaths Get Fast Start

Pleasant, Md., rammed into the rear of an automobile which had stopped to make a left turn. The auto, police said, was operated by Lucille Mary Pointer, 27 of 211 16th st. ne.

Crowley was treated at Gallinger Hospital for a laceration of the left temple. Three passengers in the auto were treated at Casualty Hospital. They were Kathryn Porch, 26, of 211 16th st. ne., sprained neck muscles; Jackie Porch, 6, of the same address, scalp contusions, and Lily Gordon, 31, of 660 Atlantic st. se., sprained neck muscles.

Edward H. Wichers, 22, of 3703 Albemarle st. nw., suffered a fractured jaw and possible fractures of the skull and left leg when his car rammed into a tree at Western ave. and Oliver st. nw. at 6:30 a. m. Wichers, who is in fair condition at Suburban Hospital, told police he was forced from the road by another car which did not stop.

Policeman Injured

Pvt. Eugene R. Blankenship, 28, of the traffic division, was treated at Emergency Hospital for injuries to his left leg after his motorcycle struck a parked car in the 700 block of 13th st. nw. at 12:50 a. m.

Blankenship, who lives at 5715 9th st. nw., was answering a burglar alarm and was driving his motorcycle and sidecar south on 13th st. He made a turn to enter an alley, but as he turned saw that the entrance to the alley was blocked by a car. He jammed on his brakees, swerved and smashed into a parked car owned by Albert J. Galle of 215 1st st. ne.

Two women were treated for minor injuries suffered in falls from automobiles.

Mrs. Kathleen V. Feltz, 28, of Gaithersburg, Md., according to police, accidentally opened the door of the car in which she was riding at 2:15 a. m. and fell to the street on Wisconsin ave. at Tenley circle nw. The car was driven by her husband, Charles W. Feltz, 31. Mrs. Feltz was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for scalp lacerations and body bruises.

Peggy Waters, 42, of 1228 Euclid st. nw., was treated at Emergency Hospital for scalp lacerations, after she was thrown to the street in the 1400 block of Irving st. nw. at 3:30 a. m. while attempting to enter a cab.

Police said four persons had preceded the woman into the cab, and the driver, Walter A. Keefer, 52, of 1513 West Virginia ave. ne., believing all the passengers were in the cab, drove off.

MacArthur Greeted

condition of the car but that workmen hoped to get the remainder of the bodies out before dark.

The accident came about 8 a. m. Many of the passengers were still in bed or had just arisen. F. F. Quaintance, Kansas City, a mail clerk in the first section, said the train was moving about 10 miles an hour at the time. Both sections of the Missouri Pacific's Missourian were far behind schedule on their night run from St. Louis to Kansas City.

They were within 95 miles of Kansas City when the second section, a mail and express train, rammed the first section passenger train.

Storm Is Blamed

Col. Hugh H. Waggoner of the State highway patrol said the New Year's Day tragedy apparently had been caused by failure of block signals, disrupted by a sleet-snow storm which had raged since Wednesday.

However, Paul J. Neff, chief executive officer of the Missouri Pacific at St. Louis, issued a statement saying the signal system was apparently in good working order and that there "probably was flagrant negligence on the part of certain train employes."

The crash shot the front train 175 feet down the ice-coated tracks before it could stop.

Five mail cars from the second section were thrown from the track, some split wide open and mail scattered over the snow-covered countryside.

Bodies were taken to Sedalia where coroners sought to identify them.

Dixie Winds Leave 20 Dead

cue workers reported finding the body of a baby amid a rubbish pile, the child still with a thumb in his mouth.

As the tornado hit yesterday, said Mrs. Clayton, "I saw him (her husband) knocked to the floor. The piece of wood was sticking out of his side. I pulled at it. Blood started pouring out. His mouth opened and he became limp. He gasped once more. He was dead."

The child was unidentified.

Freakish stories developed as residents attempted to describe nature's vicious tricks. Davis Cox's tan Persian cat, Fuzzy, was missing 15 hours but finally found inside the stuffng and springs of a sofa.

One man ran from his home and threw himself into a ditch when his roof seemed to be tottering. The wind plucked off the roof and dumped it on top of him in the ditch. He was not injured seriously.

One house was turned bottom-side upward—with even the flooring still in place.

The fury was so sudden few could describe it. "It happened fast," said 18-year-old R. C. Pilcher, a mehanic, in a typical comment. "The house moved and then I pulled somebody out from under a heavy chest of drawers and that's about all I remember."

A Red Cross capitulation showed 150 homes destroyed in Cotton Valley and 50 damaged, with "tremendous" but uncounted damage to the business section.

the challenge that it interferes with commerce, as a matter of balance between exercise of the local police power and the need for national uniformity in the regulations for interstate travel. It seems clear to us that seating arrangements for the different races in interstate motor travel requires a single, uniform rule to promote and protect the national interest."

[The text of Judge Paul's decision was not available last night. One apparent difference between the Morgan case and the current case is that the former involved a State law, the latter a company regulation.—Editor's note.]

The judge pointed out, also, that Atlantic Greyhound had on file with the ICC its schedule of tariffs carrying the following reservations:

"The carriers reserve to themselves full control and discretion as to seating of passengers and reserve the right to change such seating at any time during the trip."

The bus company, and other motor carriers, said during the trial that whites and Negroes were segregated on buses in the South as a means of preserving order and they regarded the regulation as "reasonable."

Judge Paul said he recognized that a regulation that was reasonable today might not be reasonable tomorrow yet in the light of the testimony he could not call the contested regulation unreasonable.

at this moment," Eaton said, "because of the vast implications of the program. I wouldn't care to commit myself until we've given the whole question the proper study."

Eaton said his committee will meet January 8 or 9

"We propose," he said, "to give as much time and study as is necessary to a complete understanding of all the problems that are involved in what is known as the Marshall Plan—including the Herter plan.

"The United States is now assuming its place of world leadership in its own interests as well as the interests of mankind."

Eaton said he will introduce a bill for his committee only after it finishes its studies.

"This is not a relief proposition," the Foreign Affairs chairman said. "This is a reconstruction proposition, and in the reconstruction of western Europe so that they will be able to function as part of the world economy, we are not philanthropists.

"Wherever possible, in my judgment, there must be an equitable quid pro quo, in which they give us something for what we give them.

Italian Republic Comes Into Being

Intrigue Is Told

Reds Shopped For New King Of Romania

Vienna, Jan. 1 (NYHT).—Before the decision to install a republic in Romania, the Romanian Communist Party and Soviet diplomats in Bucharest engaged in a series of weird negotiations to maintain the kingdom but were unable to find a suitable candidate for the throne.

The story of the negotiations, disclosed tonight by highly authoritative sources, is in the tradition of fabulous Balkan intrigue and the decision to drop the whole idea of the monarchy is just as garish.

Neither the Romanian Communists nor their Soviet advisers could decide which of their candidates would cause the least harmful public reaction, so the republic was established.

The Romanian Communists favored the Archduke Anton of Hapsburg, whose wife is the Princess Ileana of Romania and aunt of King Mihai. The Russians were interested, it was reliably reported, in restoring former King Carol, Mihai's father, to the throne.

Feared a Hapsburg

The Russians feared the choice of a Hapsburg because of the effect the move might have upon central European nations carved out of the old Hapsburg monarchy. The Romanian Communists thought that recalling Carol would result in the peasants staging long-term passive resistance in opposition to him.

The Communists' choice of Archduke Anton was personally espoused, informed sources said, by War Minister Emil Bodnaras, since December 23 one of Romania's Communist triumvirate who shares the country's governing responsibilities with Foreign Minister Ana Pauker and Finance Minister Vasile Luca. Bodnaras for more than three years has been a close friend of Princess Ileana.

The Soviet-Romanian Communist eagerness to replace Mihai resulted from the young King's unwillingness to comply with a prearranged plan to have the National Peasant Party leader, Juliu Maniu, publicly executed. Mihai, informants reported, threatened to disclose the plan abroad.

Mihai Was Impatient

In addition, Mihai had been showing increasing signs of impatience with the Communist-dominated government. He apparently displayed so much opposition on political proposals in the last year that his stand on Maniu, who was sentenced to life imprisonment, resulted in the determination to oust him from the throne before he left Romania to attend the wedding of Princess Elizabeth.

After the Communist negotiations with Archduke Anton flopped, Soviet representatives sounded out Carol in Portugal. Among the proposals was the stipulation of a reconciliation with his former wife, Queen Mother Helen, and a divorce from Magda Lupescu, Carol's present wife.

Carol was amenable to the proposal, informed quarters said, but the Romanian Communists balked.

Cross of Savoy Missing From Flag; President Greeted

Rome, Jan. 1 (AP).—Drums of military units throughout Italy rattled today in brief ceremonies heralding the Italian Republic, which came into legal being at midnight.

Throughout the peninsula the Italian flag—minus the cross of the Royal House of Savoy—was raised and military commanders announced to their men that the constitution of the new republic was now in force.

Newspapers gave much space to the burial in Egypt yesterday of Vittorio Emanuele III, who for 43 years was King of Italy. The event emphasized for Italians more than anything else the passing of an era.

Pay Call on President

Members of the government, led by Premier Alcide de Gasperi, paid their New Year's respects to Enrico de Nicola, president of the republic, after meeting in an extraordinary session to tackle the immediate problem—aid to unemployed.

The session was devoted to preparation of an announcement by De Gasperi of the opening of a subscription fund to finance aid for the jobless. The government opened the fund with an allotment of one billion lire ($1,697,000) and the personal donation of another one million lire by members of the government.

The Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor will participate by asking its nearly six million members each to contribute a half-day's pay.

To Get Palace

In its holiday meeting, the cabinet also confirmed a previous decision to turn over the Quirinal Palace, the King's old residence, to President Enrico de Nicola.

The President now lives in the Giustiniani Palace. A spokesman said tonight that, since a new President is to be chosen by the Legislature that will be elected next April, De Nicola would stay there and use the Quirinal Palace only for official functions.

Six or seven rooms of the palace will be opened for the President's use, it was stated, and the rest kept closed.

In the Province of Verona, Ansa News Agency reported, farm workers again conducted demonstrations and scuffles took place with police.

Princess Says She'll Follow Ex-King Mihai

Copenhagen, Denmark, Jan. 1 (AP).—Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma said in an interview today that she was completely in love with Mihai, the abdicated King of Romania, and "wherever he goes I will follow him."

The Danish princess is at the residence of her uncle, Prince Axel, in a Copenhagen suburb, anxiously awaiting word from Mihai. She said the abdication Tuesday was a complete surprise to her.

"Mihai and I met for the first time in London at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth. It was love at first sight—I did not think it could happen to me," said the 24-year-old princess.

"When Mihai and I parted in Lausanne we had no definite plans for the future," she continued.

"After leaving Lausanne I had plans to go to America. But now I could not go after I have heard the news of Mihai's abdication.

"I have had no word from Mihai and I do not know anything about plans for the future. It seems, however, after what I read in the papers, that he intends to go to Switzerland—but wherever he goes I will follow him. But I will not leave Copenhagen until I have heard from him."

If Mihai weds the princess he will not marry into a wealthy family. She is heir, however, to a small fortune left her mother in the will of a Danish millionaire who died last summer.

Bush Pilots Rescue Airman in Far North

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SAVED FROM DEATH IN SUBARCTIC—Daring bush pilots who braved snow and subzero temperatures help an Air Force flier to one of two small rescue planes 95 miles from Nome, Alaska, where they saved six airmen from a B-29 Superfortress crash. The rescue came six days after the B-29 crashed while on a training flight. Identification of individuals was not made

Missing B-29 Feared Sunk In Cook Inlet

Anchorage, Alaska, Jan. 1 (AP).—Fear that a missing B-29 Superportress and its nine crewmen may have fallen into the waters of Cook Inlet were expressed today by a veteran Alaska construction engineer.

Cliff Lenihan, who said he was sitting with his wife in the lobby of a downtown hotel when the sky lighted up "like the glow from a neon sign," placed the origin of the flash as directly west of the city about over mid-channel of the inlet.

"It was snowing at the time, but the sky was so bright that buildings on the street were lighted up," he said.

The missing plane vanished within two minutes of its takeoff from Elmendorf Field yesterday morning. It was en route to Fairfield, Calif., Army air base on a routine weather observation and reconnaissance flight, the Army Air Transport Command announced in San Francisco.

A fruitless aerial search was launched immediately after observers in the field control tower reported the flash on the plane's line of flight. It came only moments after the B-29 sent an emergency call that the No. 3 engine was out.

A ground party also set out by Army weasel on a round-about trip to the area—50 miles to Palmer and cross-country about 40 miles to the Point McKenzie area. It found no trace of the craft.

The apparent disaster raised to 14 the total of men missing, and probably dead, in two B-29 mishaps in the final week of 1947.

The pilot and navigator of another plane, Lieuts. Vern H. Arnett and Frederick Sheetz, are being sought by dog sled and aerial search 600 miles to the northeast, 95 miles north of Nome.

They have been missing since Christmas Day, two days after the plane and its eight-man crew crashed, when they set out afoot for an isolated Eskimo village.

Chinese Red Chief Tells of Big Push

San Francisco, Jan. 1 (AP).—Mao Tse-tung, chief of the Chinese Communists, declared in a statement broadcast by the Communist radio today that his forces now were conducting a nation-wide offensive and confidently predicted defeat of the Chiang Kai-shek government despite United States aid.

The Communist radio described the statement as the first part of a 10,000-word report by Mao at a meeting of the Chinese Communist central committee on December 25.

It said the remainder would be broadcast during the next three days.

In the portion broadcast today and heard by the Associated Press in San Francisco, Mao repeated the familiar Communist charges that Chiang Kai-shek was a tool of American imperialism, which he said was directing a counter-revolutionary war "against the independence of the Chinese nation and the liberation of the Chinese people."

Chiang Announces Gains Against Reds

Nanking, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, addressing a National government New Year's celebration ceremony today, announced major gains against the Communists and urged redoubled efforts to suppress the "bandits" and win the civil war.

Chiang announced in general terms Nationalist military gains in the areas of Mukden and the Peiping-Hankow and Peiping-Suiyuan railways.

Meanwhile, semi-official dispatches from Manchuria claimed the Communists had begun a wholesale retreat in the northwestern arc of Mukden's outer defense perimeter in the vicinity of Hsinmin, 50 miles west of Mukden following a "crushing defeat" December 26. Progovernment reports claimed the battle had "turned the tide" in Manchuria, saying more than 6000 Communists were captured and 10,000 killed or wounded.

Jews Wade Into Holy Land

cepted and brought to the eastern Mediterranean island under an escort of seven British warships, including two cruisers.

The Jews on the Pan Crescent and Pan York had sailed from Bulgarian ports on the Black Sea.

The unofficial report that 40 Arabs had been killed in fighting along the Palestine coastal plain said the casualties occurred when Hagana fighters shot up two Arab villages inhabited by oil workers.

The police, referring to the same operations, said six Arabs and two Jews were killed in a 45-minute battle in Balad Esh Shiekh. At least 30 persons were wounded when the Jews, using machine guns and grenades, also struck at the village of Hawassa.

In the mixed Arab and Jewish sections of Haifa some 20 persons were reported wounded in sporadic gunfights in the streets.

Inside Jerusalem's old walled city police said Arabs virtually had isolated several hundred Jews.

(An authoritative British government spokesman said in London that Britain might abandon her mandate over Palestine before the scheduled May 15 date because of continuing strife in the Holy Land. He said the fighting in Palestine also might prevent Britain from evacuating all her 70,000 troops and their equipment by the proposed date of August 1.)

2 Ships Reported Cleared in Balkans

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—A senior delegate of the Jewish underground said today that 80 to 90 per cent of the 350,000 Jews in Romania want to go to Palestine and 50 to 60 per cent "are willing to leave at the first opportunity, legal or otherwise."

This delegate inspected the loading of 12,000 Jews aboard the ships Pan Crescent and Pan York at the Port of Burgas before they sailed for Palestine.

Stock Offer Completes Deal As Britain Takes Over Rails

London, Jan. 1 (AP).—The British treasury tonight completed nationalization of the British transport system with an offer of new stock to the one million shareholders in 4 main line and 54 smaller railways, the canal system and other inland transport.

Since 1939 the British government has controlled the transportation system and nationalization became effective today with no effect on operations. The newly created British Transport Commission supplanted railroad boards of directors.

The ne wtransport stock, with a maturity date 1978-1988, bears 3 per cent interest. Treasury officials estimated that the new stock to the value of about £1,000,000,000 ($4,000,000,000) will be exchanged for the old railway stocks, and that the annual interest charge will be £30,000,000. Since 1939 the government has paid £43,000,000 to the companies yearly as management and stockholder compensation.

The Treasury announcement said that each holder of railway or other transport securities will be given the new transport stock on a pound for pound value.

British railway nationalization involves, according to government officials, the largest transfer of property from private to public ownership ever carried out. Involved are 58 railways with 52,000 miles of track spanning the country, 20,500 locomotives, 41,000 passenger coaches and 1,200,000 boxcars, in addition to 70 railway hotels, 100 steamships in the railway service, 11,000 motor vehicles and 25,000 horse vehicles.

Oil Diversion Investigation To Be Started

By The Associated Press

A Senate inquiry into United States oil exports, centering around reports that military supplies are being diverted to foreign aid programs, is due to open Monday.

At the same time the Senate Small Business Subcommittee on oil headed by Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) intends to look into the Hyde Park Agreement between the United States and Canada, a 1941 pact which still has a bearing on trade between the two nations.

The committee has asked representatives of the State and Commerce Departments and the Army-Navy Petroleum Board to testify.

Much of the testimony, committee attaches said, is expected to be centered on reports that the State Department has been using oil procured by the Petroleum Board for military purposes to supply other nations under the foreign aid programs.

Additionally, the committee wants to know if the State Department intends to use military supplies to furnish oil that might be required for any further foreign aid programs, such as the Marshall Plan.

Committee members say they are interested primarily in seeing that petroleum—particularly fuel oil which is in critically short supply in some domestic regions—is made available to small businessmen so that they can continue to supply their customers.

This oil must come from major oil companies who, at previous congressional hearings, have testified through their representatives that military requirements for petroleum products have increased sharply since last June. This in turn, they said, has curtailed supplies which otherwise would have gone into normal civilian outlets.

The Hyde Park agreement was made by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada. It was, in general, a statement of principles to the end that resources of the two nations would be pooled to the best advantage for the war effort.

The Wherry Committee is presently concerned mainly with exports of petroleum and petroleum products, especially of scarce fuel oil, to Canada. Office of International Trade figures show that $110,500,000 worth were shipped to Canada in the first nine months of 1947. This compares with $95,600,000 in the full year of 1946 and $58,000,000 in 1941.

All exports to Canada, including a small amount of reexports, amounted to $1,554,300,000 in the first nine months of 1947, compared with $1,441,600,000 in 1946 and $993,500,000 in 1941.

Ecumenical Meeting Here Draws Protestant Leaders

Opening sessions of an ecumenical conference drew leaders of major Protestant bodies to the Washington Cathedral last night.

The three-day meeting is sponsored by the Cathedral's College of Preachers and the American Committee of the World Council of Churches. Its purpose is "the extension and deepening of cooperative Christian unity."

Bishop Angus Dun of the Washington Episcopal Diocese, gave an address of welcome. Herman N. Morse, an official of the Presbyterian board of home missions, presided.

A highlight of today's sessions will be a meeting at 2:30 p. m., when there will be a discussion of proposals for uniting the Angelican Church of Canada and the United Church of Canada, and union proposals made by the Archbishop of Cantebury. Dr. Douglas Horton, minister of the General Council of Congregational-Christian Churches and chairman of the American committee of the World Council of Churches, will preside.

Senate War Investigating Committee to Expire Shortly

By The Associated Press

A pet idea of Harry S. Truman when he was a Senator from Missouri appears destined to expire quietly at the end of this month after more than seven years of national attention.

It is the Senate's "war investigating committee" which was set up back in March, 1941, under chairmanship of Senator Truman.

Some of the President's intimate cronies on Capitol Hill say the activities of the committee under his leadership put him on the path to the White House.

Republicans, in control of the Senate since the last election, are expected to let the special committee expire January 31 by shifting its nvestigating duties to a regular standing committee.

Chairman Aiken (R., Vt.) of the standing Expenditures Committee told a reporter that he expects any uncompleted inquiries to be transferred to his group.

Aiken plans to install Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), who has been directing most of the war investigating hearings in recent months, as director of any new inquiries. It is known that Ferguson desires to retain the experienced staff of investigators and attorneys built up by the special committee.

Since Chairman Truman began the investigations, the committee has received nearly one million dollars for expenses but its members claim savings of many times this amount as a result of their checkups on multi-billion dollar war and postwar expenditures.

Before the month-end deadline the special committee is expected to produce reports on these matters:

1. The lengthy hearings into the 30 million dollars worth of aircraft contracts awarded to Howard Hughes, Hollywood plane designer and film producer.

2. Subsequent hearings into the wartime activities of Bennett E. Meyers, retired major general who since has been indicted for perjury.

3. Hearings into operations of United States oil interests in Saudi Arabia and price charged the Navy for oil.

4. Hearings on a postwar industrial mobilization plan.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

cuts prices in bid to stop inflation

$50,000,000 AT RETAIL LEVELS

"You have been worrying about high prices for a long time. So have we at General Electric. It is obvious that we are in a painful inflationary spiral. And it is also obvious that every industry, every company, every individual, must do all in their power not only to stop this spiral, but to reverse it.

"For this reason, General Electric is reducing the prices on a wide range of products. The reduction is effective January 1, 1948. Some of the products affected by price reductions are listed in the box at right. We estimate that these reductions will make possible a saving to the public of close to 50 million dollars during the coming year. The reductions range from 3% to 10%. The average is somewhat more than 5%.

NOTE: General Electric prices were already relatively low in comparison with other prices. Between 1940 and September 1947, G-E prices as a whole increased only 38%, while prices for all manufactured products and for farm products were—according to government figures—increasing 86% and 175%, respectively. During the same period the average hourly earnings of G-E employees and the cost of metals, two of the major items making up G-E costs, rose 73% and 57%, respectively—substantially more than the prices of G-E products.

Profits still too low

"I want to make it clear that this action by General Electric is not a move to reduce profit. Our post-war profits have been less on each sales dollar than before the war. As we have pointed out repeatedly in recent months, our profits, running at a rate of 6.8c on the sales dollar, are less than half the pre-war rate and much lower than the normal safe rate which we believe is necessary in the operation of our business.

Voluntary action and self-restraint needed

"It is our conviction and belief that only voluntary action and self-restraint by individual companies and citizens can turn the tide of inflation. We earnestly hope that others will join with us in this effort. If they do, materials and components purchased by us will also be reduced in price, and then even further reductions in the prices of our products may be made possible.

"We expect to maintain these prices, provided no further increase occurs in our own labor costs or in prices of components and materials which we purchase in so great a measure from others, and provided there is no further distortion of the materials situation through rationing or new allocations."

President, General Electric Company

BLS Report Hints Higher Living Costs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Bureau of Labor Statistics' crystal ball shows a new year of higher prices, higher rents and labor campaigns for "third round" wage increases.

These forecasts were between-the-lines readings in the 1947 review statement of BLS Commissioner Ewan Clague, issued yesterday. Clague and the BLS are not in the prediction business, but those prospects emerged from a summary of the labor statistics for the past year.

The history of wages and prices in 1947 was such, Clague found, that "real" wages—earnings measured in terms of what they would buy—went up only 1 per cent during the first 11 months of the year. They were 4.7 per cent below the level of June, 1946. Price control was still in effect through June, 1946, under the original OPA law.

Living Costs Still Rising

The BLS saw no signs to indicate a halt in the rising cost of living. In the middle of the year, it pointed out, there was a decline, but after June the rise was resumed. Three factors contributed to it:

1. Drought damage to the corn crop, and heavy export demand for grain.
2. Higher coal prices following increased wages and freight rates.
3. Higher prices and scarcity of basic steel.

Another element which helped boost the BLS cost of living index was increased rents under the new, and relaxed, rent control law. Residential rents in large cities went up 5 per cent in the first four months of the new law. "Further advances are in prospect," the BLS commented.

New Wage Demands

The stage is set, Clague indicated, for "third round" wage increases. (There have been two rounds of general wage increases since VJ-Day. Editor's note).

Already in the textile and apparel industries contracts have been concluded calling for wage jumps of from 7½ to 15 cents an hour.

"At the year's end," Clague continued, "many unions were formulating wage demands to recoup losses in real earnings experienced by their members since the negotiation of their previous contracts.

"Wage demands are pending in a number of major industries and trades including woolen textiles, leather, telegraph, shipping and local transportation.

"Some of the major agreements—including steel, automobiles, and electrical manufacturing—will expire or can be reopened in the late winter or spring of 1948. Other agreements, as in coal mining and railroads, may be reopened upon 30 days' notice."

Productivity Up Some

In the field of productivity—the worker's output per hour—the BLS found that it "has resumed the gradual and steady upward movement typical in the American economy." But, Clague admitted, the high hopes held by some economists that productivity would jump far and quickly after the war "proved unrealistic."

Commenting on America's record of 60 million jobs, Clague noted that there is a net of about 1½ million more people in the labor market than had been expected on the basis of prewar trends.

There are about 1½ million more "older" persons (men over 55 and women over 35) than was previously considered normal, and about 1½ million more teen-agers than normal.

Partially offsetting these, however, there have been withdrawn from the labor market about one-half million younger men, who are mostly former GIs in school, and 1¼ million younger women, aged 20 to 34, because of the "extremely high postwar marriage and birth rates."

The most important single fact in the 1947 employment situation, Clague said, was that "almost everybody who wanted a job was able to find one within a reasonably short time."

Labor Supply Ample

Though there was not generally a surplus of labor—unemployment was at a minimum—nevertheless, the BLS found that except for a few specific situations, "manpower was not a limiting factor on production." In other words, at least during 1947, there was enough labor to meet all of industry's needs.

This contrasts with the argument of some industrialists that labor was so scarce the work week would have to be increased from its present 40 to 44 or 48 hours.

As to unemployment, Clague said it was "noteworthy" that the rate is no greater among older people than among younger adults.

Such unemployment as there is, he said, is of relatively short duration. It is made up mostly of people who are either "between jobs" or who have been laid off for seasonal reasons.

Blind 'Ham' Builds Radio Rig To Put Crippled Friend on Air

The Washington Post

W3HBK IS ON THE AIR—Bob Topham flicks the switch of the new "ham" radio station built for him by Irving Hershowitz, who is listening. Irv is blind

W3KAM

Robert Topham is 32 years old and he's confined to a wheelchair with arthritis—but he can visit his friends every day with just a flick of a switch.

"Bob" is a radio "ham" operator. Today, at his home, 1337 Meridian pl. nw., he is back on the air after an unlucky break silenced his station, W3HBK, for 8 months.

And he's back with his fellow-hams every night because another radio amateur—who is totally blind—built a receiver and transmitter for him. The helping hand came from Irving Hershowitz, 23, of 4120 19th st. ne., who has been blind since birth.

Bob was stricken with arthritis in January of 1936. Almost totally incapacitated from the beginning, he became interested in ham radio as one hobby he could still indulge in. He got his license in 1937.

Operated Before War

He operated a station until the start of the war when all amateur operation was banned for the duration. Upon resumption of amateur activities at the end of the war, Bob went back on the air with a low-power transmitter which he purchased. He operated this transmitter until early in 1947.

About this time he decided he wanted a larger transmitter. A friend offered to build one for him and construction got under way. The small transmitter was dismantled so that some of the parts could be used in the new "rig." However, pressure of business on the part of his friend put a halt to the construction, and for eight months Bob was off the air.

This was a blow to Bob who spent most of his time, 12 to 18 hours a day, with his hobby.

One night Irv called and said, "Bob, I'm going to put you back on the air."

Began in 1937

Hershowitz received his amateur license and station call, W3HQG, in July of 1937. He is employed as a radio technician for the Air Forces at Bolling Field. At his home he operates a 500-watt transmitter he built himself.

Irv designed a 225-watt transmitter for Bob and with the help of another amateur, Ray Kemper, W3INX, 1704 Kenyon st. nw., work went on during their spare time. About a month and a half was necessary to complete the "rig."

A special switching panel for the transmitter and receiver was mounted on Bob's special wheel chair where Bob could throw the switches and tune the receiver with the aid of a "back scratcher" he holds between his hands. The microphone was suspended from overhead, and a special telephone arrangement completed the set-up. Bob got back on the air Sunday, December 21, just in time to join the Sunday evening "net of the Capital Suburban Radio Club.

A "net" is a group of stations operating on the same frequency in contact with each other.

Packers May Be Sounded Out on Rationing

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) said yesterday he plans to confer soon with Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in an attempt to line up big packers in support of meat rationing.

The Vermont lawmaker told a reporter that after talking with meat industry representatives he has no illusions about the difficulty of winning them over, but he feels it is worth a try.

Flanders for several weeks has been advocating rationing as the only way of coping with the meat shortage which the Agriculture Department has predicted will develop in the spring. Anderson, along with President Truman, also has been plugging for standby power to ration meat.

Flanders disclosed that he conferred in Chicago earlier this week with a group of packers.

"We were in general agreement that the meat situation is going to become critical by early spring," Flanders said, "but the packers naturally are opposed to rationing and prefer to let nature take its course."

The packers contended, Flanders added, that talk of rationing already is tending to reduce the prospective supply of beef.

"They reported," he said, "that cattle not only are being shipped to market at lower than usual weights as a result of the scant supply of feed grain, but that there also is a heavy shipment of calves, indicating that stockraisers are dubious about next year's grain crop."

Under these circumstances, the industry is skeptical about the chances for expanding beef production, Flanders said. They also are fearful, he went on, that rationing would drive prices down and discourage production.

In an effort to allay this fear, the Senator said he plans to suggest to Anderson or his aides that the Government's price support program be expanded to cover cattle. The effect of this would be to put a floor under beef prices, although at a level less than present prices, Flanders said.

The Senator acknowledged that any plan to encourage beef production at present would conflict with the campaign to save grain. But he expressed hope that Europe's need for grain from the United Staes largely will have been met in time to check the flow of lower weight animals to domestic markets.

Flanders said the packers also predicted that meat rationing would be accompanied by flourishing black markets.

"There is no doubt about it, there would be black markets," the Senator declared. "But I don't think they would flourish.

"With meat the only product rationed, as compared with several during the war, the Government should be able to do an effective job of policing the situation. I think black markets could be held to a minimum."

Flanders said that at his forthcoming conference with Anderson, he wants to explore just what could be done in the way of a voluntary rationing program, pending establishment of a compulsory program. He also wants to find out how long it would take to get a mandatory setup operating. Agriculture Department officials have estimated the job would require three to six months.

Any move to restore compulsory rationing is sure to meet with stormy opposition in Congress, as Mr. Truman found during the recent special session.

Hague Selects Wene As Governor Choice

New Jersey, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Former Jersey City Mayor Frank Hague today picked State Senator Elmer H. Wene as his choice for the Democratic candidate for the New Jersey governorship in 1949.

The announcement was made this afternoon by a spokesman for Hague at the annual New Year's Day reception at the city hall.

Wene, 55, served in Congress in 1937 and 1938, and then from 1941 through 1944, when he was defeated by Republican H. Alexander Smith.

6 Members of Mexican Family Killed by Fire in Farm Shack

Harlingen, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP).—Six members of a Mexican family were burned to death today in their temporary living quarters on a farm near Lyford, Willacy County. Two other members were burned critically.

The dead:

Ora Juana Leon Ochoa, 36; her daughter, Elena, 15; Trinidad Ochoa, 10; Ysidoro Ochoa, 5; Juan Ochoa, 4, and Guadalupe Ochoa, 3 months old.

The family came here from Rincon, near San Luis Potosi, Mexico, as contract farm workers. They were quartered in one room of a long sheet-metal building, which also was occupied by other farm workers families.

Pedro Ochoa, husband and father, said the fire evidently started when coals from a tub, used to heat the room, fell on the floor. He said he had poured kerosene on the floor to get rid of ants, and that the room was a mass of flames when he awoke.

Mother, Two Sons Killed

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 1 (AP).—A mother and her two small sons were burned to death and two other children were carried to safety when fire swept a three-family home today.

The victims were Mrs. Francis McLaughlin, 29, occupant of a second floor apartment, and her sons, Michael, 6, and Patrick, 4.

Child, 2, Is Victim

Boise, Idaho, Jan. 1 (AP).—A Boise girl, 2, was burned to death and her four sisters and parents were left homeless by a fire which swept through a frame house south of the city limites while the parents were away early today.

Dead is Vicki Lewis, despite heroic efforts to rescue her.

An 11-year-old baby sister, Jean Shurtz, suffered burns as she hauled Jackie Lewis, 1, from the flames. The girl spread an alarm and Bud Walker made a futile effort to save the second child. He suffered deep cuts in breaking a bedroom window. Flames drove him back.

NLRB Rules Time-Study Union Legal

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that time-study men are professional employes and entitled to union recognition and Government protection under the Taft-Hartley law.

The decision established the first "professional employes unit" under the new labor law—and produced the sharpest clash of opinion among the five board members in the four months of Taft-Hartley operations. At issue was the long-smouldering question of which employes specifically constitute a part of management.

Despite a 3-2 split on the issue, the board voted unanimously to order the Worthington Pump Co., Holyoke, Mass., to bargain collectively with the Time and Motion Study Association, an independent union representing its 17 time-study experts.

Must Stay Independent

Members of the association determine speed standards for Worthington's rank-and-file workers by computing the motions and time required in the production of pumps and air conditioning equipment.

The company contended that the employes involved were not covered by the act because they exercised management functions.

Two board members—James J. Reynolds and J. Copeland Gray—said that while they agreed that the workers were essentially management personnel, they approved the board's decision because it was the apparent intent of Congress, in passing the Taft-Hartley law, to give them bargaining rights.

Reynolds said he would hold that position, however, only so long as the union remains independent and does not affiliate with any rank-and-file organization.

Meet "Professional" Test

Gray said he was bound by the intent of Congress to give the employes bargaining rights. He noted, however, that Congress had considered them only in terms of their similarity to supervisors and "did not give adequate consideration to the essential functions performed by such employes in the profitable and efficient operation of a business."

Board Chairman Paul M. Herzog and members John M. Houston and Abe Murdock found the time-study employes to meet the "professional employe" test set up by the act.

"We conclude that the principal function of these employes is, by utilizing their training and experience, to determine the factual basis for the operation of the company's incentive wage plan," they said. "They are, therefore, essentially factfinders. Although it appears that they exercise considerable judgment and discretion in the performance of their duties, they do not do so to any substantial degree in the formulation, determination, or effectuation of management policies. They may properly constitute an appropriate unit for the purposes of collective bargaining."

The board gave the union 30 days to file non-Communist affidavits and financial registration required by the new labor act. Otherwise, the order requiring the company to bargain will be vacated.

Negotiators Meet To Avert Strike of 3000 Employes

New York, Jan. 1 (AP).—Union and company negotiators met with a Federal mediator today in a final effort to avert a strike of overseas communications workers at 1201 a. m. (EST) tomorrow.

The strike, involving more than 3000 members of the CIO American Communications Association and an independent union, would sever about two thirds of the normal radio and cable communications between the United States and foreign countries, spokesmen said.

Taking part in the last-minute talks were representatives of the ACA and the cable division of the Western Union Telegraph Co., and officials of the All-America Cable Employes Association (Ind.) and the All-America Cables and Radio, Inc.

The independent union joined with the ACA in the strike threat.

The ACA's dispute also involves Mackay Radio and Telegraph, Inc., and the Commercial Cable Co., but negotiations were broken off earlier in their cases. However, it was believed a settlement between either the ACA and Western Union or the independent union and All-America Cables would provide a basis for new contracts with all companies.

Forest L. Henderson, executive vice president of the American Cable and Radio Corp., of which Mackay, Commercial Cable, and All-America are operating subsidiaries, said earlier that principal points of disagreement were the union's demands for a 30 per cent wage increase and for a contract clause which he said would, in effect, continue in force an existing closed shop.

Present wages, Henderson said, range from $55.91 to $73.23 for operators and $38.61 to $65.65 for clerks.

He said the companies could not consider the wage increase demands because of 1947 operating losses.

Meanwhile, a threatened strike of 3500 tugboat workers in New York harbor was averted early today when operators and AFL union representatives reached agreement on a contract calling for 10-cent hourly wage increases.

The agreement was reached after 14 hours of continuous negotiations at a session called by Mayor William O'Dwyer. O'Dwyer, fearful of a repetition of the walkout two years ago which tied up the harbor for 13 days and caused a day-long city-wide business shutdown, intervened in the dispute Tuesday.

The union, Local 333 of the United Marine Division, International Longshoremen's Association had asked increases ranging from 30 to 40 cents an hour. The present contract expired last midnight.

The new agreement, which also contains insurance provisions, an increase in food allowances and minor adjustments, is subject to ratification of the union's members.

Britain Sells More Gold From Sterling Reserves

London, Jan. 1 (AP).—Britain sold another 100 million dollars worth of gold from the sterling area's steadily draining reserves during December, the treasury said tonight.

A government official said most of the dollars obtained by the gold sales were used to pay for imports. Last month's gold sales raised the total gold drain since September 1 to 512 million dollars.

D. C. Weather in December Abnormal Only for Normality

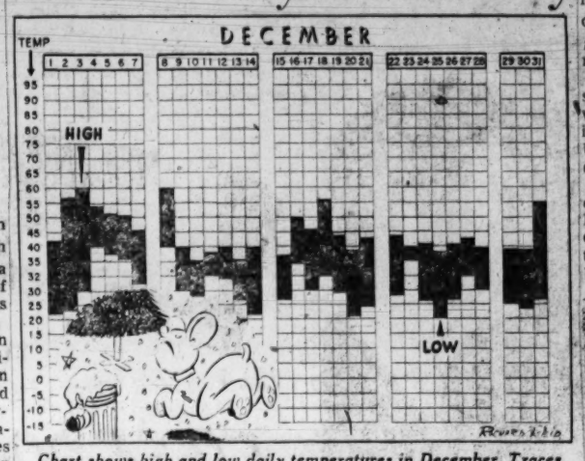

Chart shows high and low daily temperatures in December. Traces of snow were seen on the 5th, 22d, 23d and 25th, and three inches fell December 26

Snapping back after November set a record for rainfall, District weather last month was nearly normal, according to the Weather Bureau.

Marked by little out of the ordinary, December's temperature was less than a degree above normal, its snowfall was just a shade below normal, and the wind was so close to normal that no one but the Weather Bureau could tell the difference.

Only in the rain department, with a total of 1.36 inches, was December different. The average over the years is 3.12. But the lack of rai nnowhere near equalled the mark set in 1889, when only .19 inches fell.

The average temperature last month was 37.3 degrees, .7 degrees above the December average of 36.6. High spot in the month came on two days, December 3 and 8, when the thermometer hit 60. Christmas Day was the low point, with a 20-degree recording. New Year's Eve was fifth high (not to be confused with high on a fifth) with a 55-degree reading.

Record low for any December 31 came in 1880, when the mercury dropped to 13 below zero. High for a December day came in 1924, when the temperature rose to 74 on the 28, and again in 1932, with the same reading on the 19.

There were five days of snow in December, according to the bureau. Traces on the 22d, 23d and 25th, .1 inches on the 5th, and 3 inches on the 26th. The total was 3.1, and the December average is 3.3. Most snow for any December was in 1932, when 14¼ inches fell.

As for the wind and the sun, again they were close to the average. Wind velocity averaged 7 miles per hour, compared with a normal 7.3. On December 16, the wind hit 29 miles an hour. During the month there were 14 clear days, 8 partly cloudy, and 9 cloudy or rainy.

As a note for school kids, The Washington Post weather story a year ago today started with "Steady rain turned 5 inches of holiday snow and sleet into slush last night and made the reopening of schools at 9 a. m. today probable."

Air Force Beats 5 World Marks for Speed, Distance

The United States Air Force set five international records during 1947.

It listed them yesterday as follows:

Altitude record for helicopters—February 10 at Patterson Field, Ohio, Awhen a Sikorsky R-5 climbed to 19,167 feet.

Inter-city speed record—Honolulu-New York, February 28, with "Twin Mustang" North American P-82 long range fighter. It flew the 5000-mile course in 14 hours, 33 minutes.

Speed record—P-80R Lockheed "Shooting Star" jet plane, averaging 623.8 miles an hour on four passes over a course at the Muroc, Calif., Air Base. This flight on June 19 returned the record to the United States from Britain. A United States Navy Douglas "Skystreak" jet took the record away from the Air Force in August with a speed of 650.6 miles an hour.

International closed course record—flying a course between Patterson Field and Benson, Ariz., July 29-30, the Boeing B-29 "Pacusan Dreamboat" averaged 277 miles an hour, covering the 10-000-kilometer course in 22 hours, 27 minutes.

International closed course-distance-record—Pacusan Dreamboat, flew for 39 hours on a triangular course between MacDill Field, Fla., Tucson, Ariz., and Andrews Field, Md., for a total distance of 8854.8 miles.

Attempt to Kill President of Honduras Fails

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Antonio Castejon Trujillo killed one man and attacked others yesterday in an attempt to force his way into the presidential palace to assassinate President Tiburcio Carias, police said today.

Castejon Trujillo first stabbed to death Ramon Midence across the street from the palace. Then, with his knife, he attacked a policeman and forced his way into the building, attacking others on his way until presidential guards and attendants subdued him.

Police said Castejon Trujillo confessed he came from his native town of Tatumbla intending to kill the President. His motive was not given.

GOP Committee Pledged To Neutrality Within Party

Chairman Carroll Reece of the Republican National Committee said yesterday the committee will present the party program to the public, but will not try to make policy or "umpire" intra-party disputes.

Target of recent criticism by some Republican Senators, who complained of what they called "wisecracking" and attacks on Democratic programs without offering alternatives, Reece declared anew his and the committee's neutrality in selection of a Republican presidential candidate.

"The headquarters machinery of the National Committee exists to elect candidates—not to select them," he said.

Reece's remarks were included in a long letter to an estimated 17,500 party workers in which he called 1948 the "year of decision," and said the decision to be made is "whether or not the growth of 'bad' government is to be arrested and reversed."

Last month, when attacks on him by Senators Aiken and Flanders of Vermont, Baldwin of Connecticut and Smith of New Jersey reached their peak, Reece reportedly pledged that the committee would work more closely with Congress members to develop a "positive" GOP campaign program.

In his letter yesterday he said:

"Probably, the most important single factor in the determination of Republican success or failure this year will be the record of the Republican Congress. . . . It must not be overlooked that this legislative program will be an integral part of the party policy during the 1948 campaign.

"Party policy is established in two ways (1) by the platform adopted by the quadrennial national convention, and (2) during the intervals between conventions by the records of the party's elected public officials.

"The national organization of the party, as represented by the headquarters of the National Committee, is not a part of the policy-making machinery. It should not be.

"However, the National Committee organization has been and will continue to be available to assist in the presentation of the party program and record to the public. . . .

"Inevitably, of course, there are occasional differences of opinion concerning methods for the attainment of party objectives. It is not the function or duty of the national headquarters to umpire such disagreements; it is guided by the decisions made by the members of the legislative body themselves."

Reece said with the exceptions he mentioned "it is not only the right but the duty of every Republican to promote the candidacy of whomever he deems best fitted for the presidential office."

Tariff Slashes Become Effective

Tariff reductions on hundreds of products went into effect yesterday in the United States and eight other countries in accordance with a general international agreement reached at Geneva.

Scotch whisky from Britain, sugar and tobacco from Cuba and wines from France were included in the import duty cuts made by the United States in return for concessions on American exports.

Other countries putting into effect now the pact made at the International Trade Conference in October are Australia, Canada, and the Belgium-Netherlands-Luxembourg Customs Union.

As additional countries ratify the agreement tariff cuts and other mutual concessions will be formally proclaimed on products in which they have primary concern.

The general agreement was supplemented in the case of Cuba by a special exclusive agreement covering a list of products figuring prominently in the Cuban trade with this country.

At the time the pact was announced the National Association of Alcoholic Beverage Importers said one result would be a 30-cent drop in the retail price of fifths of imported whisky. The association said the saving would be passed on to consumers quickly.

Funds to Raise Teachers Pay Urged

Athens, Ga., Jan. 1 (AP).—A University of Wisconsin mathematics professor today advocated spending money now used in high schools for vocational education, athletics, physical education, dramatics and shop equipment on raising teachers' salaries.

"Because the scholar has been pushed from the field of education, the ultimate ambition of the average school teacher has degenerated to the desire for appointment as a school principal to escape teaching duties," Prof. C. C. MacDuffee asserted.

He spoke at the thirty-first annual meeting of the Mathematical Association of America.

MacDuffee said no longer is the development of the intellectually superior student into a scholar the main aim in American education.

"Our schools," he said, "now claim they are developing within the student the American way of life which, according to my observations, might be defined as a contempt for scholarship and the worship of football and the gods and goddesses of Hollywood."

Named by Truman

Snyder Heads Government Red Cross Unit

President Truman yesterday appointed Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder as chairman of the Government unit for the 1948 Red Cross Fund campaign to be conducted in March.

The President took the opportunity to commend the American Red Cross for a "magnificent and undisputed achievement" during the past year.

In a statement to the heads of executive departments, commissions and agencies, he urged that all Government units throughout the Nation actively cooperate with their respective Red Cross chapters in the campaign.

To Relieve Burdens

"We have ample power to relieve the burdens of our fellowmen and by generous acts of kindness and goodwill impel new life and hope," the President declared. "Each citizen through teamwork in his Red Cross is serving his country and thereby building a stronger, more splendid America."

Joseph C. Grew, general chairman of the 1948 campaign, said the drive would receive new impetus from the appointment of Snyder.

Snyder, who will direct the appeal to all employes of the Federal and District Governments i nthe March campaign, will be assisted by the heads of more than 80 Government divisions. Citing the services of the Red Cross, Snyder said it would give him deep and real satisfaction to serve in the campaign.

Carter to Assist

Clarence E. Carter will again act as director of Government unit activities at Chapter headquarters, as he has in five previous campaigns, assisting Snyder with organization details.

75 Millions In Aid Given Jews Abroad

New York, Jan. 1 (NYHT).—In an opimistic report on the year's activities of the Joint Distribution Committee, Edward M. M. Warburg, chairman, said today that the record sum of $75,092,000 had been appropriated in 1947 for aiding distressed Jews abroad and that "excellent progress" had ben made in helping these Jews to earn their own livelihood.

Warburg said that the JDC aided nearly one million Jewish men, women and children in Europe, North Africa, the Middle East and the Orient. JDC funds are provided by the United Jewish Appeal.

Economic rehabilitation of the Jews still remaining in Europe, Warburg said, has ben furnished by JDC producers' cooperatives. Jews pool their skills and resources in these and are helped to become self-supporting, he said. Also, JDC credit societies lend money to Jewish artisans, merchants and professionals to enable them to return to productive work; vocational training projects fit Jews for work, and work projects in DP camps enable Jews to develop skills in preparation for resettlement.

Warburg said that a total of 103,000 persons, including dependents, became fully or partially self-supporting through these rehabiliation activities. In addition, JDC provided food, either in part or entirely, for 750,000 Jews in Europe through 375 JDC canteens and feeding stations.

The 327 JDC children's homes and nurseries gave assistance to 30,000 Jewish children, mainly orphans, while JDC funds also went for direct help to 102,000 other Jewish children, Warburg reported. During the year 380 hospitals, dispensaries, clinics, sanatoria and convalescent homes were either established or maintained, and hundreds of JDC-supported schools were attended by 75,000 Jewish youngsters.

Former Occupants Of Street Floor Tell of Alterations

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Did anyone illegally alter walls on the first floor of the partially collapsed Empire Building? And if so, who did it?

These questions were still unanswered yesterday.

The special five-man investigating board which has been trying to fix the blame for the disaster will resume sessions Monday, Board Chairman Stewart H. Beall said last night.

Four persons were killed and 12 injured when a section of the seven-story structure at New York ave. and 9th st. nw. collapsed December 16.

Cafe Men Contacted

Yesterday The Washington Post contacted the various operators of restaurants on the street floor of the collapsed area and found the following:

George L. Goodacre, who operated a restaurant there from 1905 to 1924, said that about 1908 or 1909 he had expanded his operations to include the area formerly occupied by a next-door cigar store situated on the 9th st. side of the Empire Building.

At that time, he arranged for the construction of a 9-to-10-foot opening in the wall separating his restaurant from the store. This was done to permit use of the added floor space for a ladies' dining room.

At the rear of the cigar store area, he built a wooden partition so that a kitchen could be placed behind it. Another opening about 4 feet wide was then cut in the same wall to permit entrance from the main dining room to the kitchen.

Contractor Deceased

Goodacre said he remembered employing Joe Kolb, now deceased, "who used to do all my work at that time," to make the alterations. He said a steel beam was placed over the large opening, but he believed none was used over the smaller entrance.

(The two openings may have been the ones shown in the photograph published in The Washington Post Wednesday morning indicating the interior of the City Finance Co., occupant of the area at the time of collapse. The wooden partition described may be the one referred to by George F. Linkins, former Empire Building rental agent, in his testimony Tuesday before the board. Linkins said a wall which had been standing during his firm's management of the structure had been removed, according to the photograph.)

In 1925, the restaurant was sold to Andrew G. Panagopoulos, James Speros and Jean Athanasopoulos. The last-named died, but the others are now partners in the operation of the Silver Fox restaurant at 5324 Wisconsin ave. nw.

Opening Enlarged

Speros said last night that in 1930, '31 or '32, the main opening was enlarged by 2 to 3 feet making it "more than 10 feet wide." He said the smaller opening was left unchanged. He could not remember the name of the contractor who made the alteration.

Panagopoulos said the opening had been enlarged about 3 feet and that a steel beam was placed above the open area during the alterations. He could not remember the exact year or the name of the contractor.

In 1943, the syndicate sold the eating place to Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Chipouras and George K. Valliotis. The couple is now living in Edgewater, Md., and Valliotis is a salesman for the Arabian Coffee Co., 918 9th st. nw., immediately adjacent to one end of the Empire Building.

Valliotis, after examining the photograph of the City Finance Co. interior, said, "There's no change that I can see from when we had the restaurant."

He said that at one time Chipouras had consulted a builder about removing the pier between the two openings but had been informed that "it was impossible." He said no alterations had been made during their ownership.

Building Sold in 1945

In September, 1945, Nick Papanicolas purchased the Empire Building and informed his tenants that improvements must be made in the establishment, Papanicolas said yesterday. When no agreement could be reached, he instigated eviction proceedings in the Landlord and Tenant Court.

On November 30, 1946, the restaurant closed and the eating place partnership was dissolved, Papanicolas said. He then decided to rent it for other purposes and so in September, 1947, the City Finance Co. moved into the vacated area after first improving the interior. Their contractor, Morris Cladny, has insisted no alterations in the openings or walls were made at that time.

Harry Atkinson, contractor, on Tuesday informed the board that he had been asked by several prospective renters last fall to estimate how much the cost would be to enlarge the two openings. He said that he had not undertaken the job, but contended that when he revisited the premises in April or May, 1947, he found the openings had been enlarged.

The District Department of Inspections has no record of any permit for construction work in the building interior after 1928.

Fay Sends Attorney

The entire building was originally owned by Stilson Hutchins, founder of The Washington Post, and upon his death was administered by three trustees. They were Charles H. Merillat, Meyer Cohen and Thomas M. Gittings. When the first two died, G. W. Graham and Alexander C. Robeson were named instead, Gittings said yesterday.

Gittings said the trustees had not made any alterations in the collapsed area. Papanicolas said that since he took over, he had not made any alterations there, either, except that the wooden partition separating the dining room from kitchen was removed. He said the partition did not support any part of the building and had gradually been falling apart.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay disclosed yesterday that he had been invited by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young to send an observer to the investigating committee sessions. He said he had assigned Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff to listen to the evidence presented to determine whether action is required "by this office."

D. C. Recorded Crimes Rise Sharply in '47

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Recorded crimes in Washington increased sharply during the past year, a study of Police Department records indicated yesterday.

"Uncorrected" police reports for the first 11 months of 1947 showed there were more than 12,000 felonies reported here compared to but 9281 during the entire year of 1946.

The most significant rise, according to the figures given reporters, was indicated in the aggravated assaults. Here there were 2233 cases during the 1947 period and 1166 during 1946.

Murders and homicides declined significantly in 1947. Of these cases, there were but 68 through November in 1947. During 1946 there were 103.

Fewer Autos Stolen

Reported robberies increased from 923 to 1154. Sex offenses rose from 46 to 70. Housebreaking went from 2842 to 3986 and grand larcenies from 1468 to 1711.

A decrease was noted in stolen automobiles where the figures read 2232 for 1946 and 1727 for the first 11 months of 1947.

A category known as "other felonies" showed a decline from 1946's 501 cases to 329.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, declined to comment on the figures, saying that they were but part of the statistical picture, had not been corrected statistically and might not show the true and complete picture of the year.

It is difficult to ascertain from the figures whether or not the crime situation here has become more or less grave since Major Barrett took office on July 2.

Robberies Rise

However, it is definitely indicated that robberies here have increased, as have aggravated assaults. Sex offenses have decreased as have burglaries.

Comparing the figures against those cited by the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the first six months of this year, it is seen, that:

Robberies during the July-November period were 707 compared to 447 during January-June. Sex offenses in the rape category were but 12 during July-November as compared to 58 during the prior six-month period.

Aggravated assaults rose from 1025 during the first six months to 1208 during the next five. Burglaries decreased from 2641 to 1345. Grand larcenies went from 823 to 888.

Author and His Former Wife Remarry After 24 Years Apart

A 56-year-old author and his former wife, whose first marriage ended in divorce 24 years ago, were remarried here yesterday on the thirty-first anniversary of their original wedding.

Wendell Brooks Phillips of 247 Delaware ave. sw., and his former wife, Mrs. Margaret Becker of 4306 Kaywood dr., Mount Rainier, Md., exchanged wedding vows for the second time yesterday afternoon at Riverdale Presbyterian Church.

The part of "cupid" in the reconcilliation was played by their 18-month-old granddaughter, Valerie Phillips, who was living with Mrs. Becker.

Went to See Child

"To see the child, I went out there for dinner several times," Phillips explained. Time had already mellowed the "misunderstanding" which led to the divorce, he said, and they quickly patched up their differences.

The couple was first married January 1, 1917, when Phillips was teaching at Piedmont College, Demorest, Ga., and his bride was a 16-year-old high school student there.

During their seven years of marriage, they had two children, Lieut. (j.g.) Richard H. Phillips, now at Camp Lejeune, N. C., and Wendell Brooks Phillips, jr.

Second Husband Died

After the divorce, Mrs Phillips married again, but her husband died several years ago. "We saw each other only a few times in those years," Phillips said. Until recently he lived in Georgia and North Carolina and she in Baltimore.

"When the granddaughter was born, our daughter-in-law (the wife of Lieutenant Phillips) had no place to live and moved in with her mother-in-law, then the widow Becker," he explained. At this point, the romance began anew.

The couple will leave today for a trip to Chapel Hill, N. C., after which they'll make their home here. Phillips is one of the editors compiling a history of World War II for the War Department.

Munshower to Retire

Baltimore, Jan. 1 (AP).—Elmer F. Munshower, superintendent of the State Reformatory for Males at Breathedsville, will retire January 31 and will be succeeded by Henry Russell Raymond, assistant superintendent of the institution. Munshower, a former State police superintendent, has been head of the reformatory since July, 1945.

New Committee To Study Military Sciences Named

A new committee to study "basic physical sciences" in connection with the research and development activities of the National Military Establishment was announced yesterday by Vannevar Bush, chairman of the Research and Development Board.

The body will be headed by Dr. W. V. Houston, president of Rice Institute. Other members will include two civilians and two members each from the Army, Navy and Air Force.

It will study these agencies' research programs, and recommend the allocation among them of research projects in the fields of fluid dynamics, physics, chemistry, metallurgy and materials, and mathematics.

Presidential Ingratitude

The curt and ungracious way in which President Truman terminated the tenure of James M. Landis as chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board is an object lesson in how not to attract and keep good men in the Government. Whatever his personal idiosyncrasies, Mr. Landis has demonstrated over a long period that he is a conscientious public servant of exceptional abilities and that he throws himself into whatever post he fills with 24-hour-a-day energy. Yet President Truman chose to fire him without so much as a fare-thee-well. It is impossible to reconcile Mr. Truman's brusque action with the praise bestowed on Landis by the Administration as recently as last June. At that time he was awarded the Medal for Merit for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services to the United States from April 15, 1942, to September 10, 1943" as director of the Office of Civilian Defense. If Mr. Landis deserved this accolade, as we are sure he did, then certainly he deserved more consideration at the hands of the man who appointed him to the CAB.

Indeed, an even stranger contrast is to be found between the summary dismissal of Mr. Landis and President Truman's remarks at Princeton University last June 17. Speaking about the inability of the Government to hold broad-caliber men in top jobs, the President said: "If our national policies are to succeed, they must be administered by officials of broad experience, mature outlook and sound judgment. There is, however, a critical shortage of such men—men who possess the capacity to deal with great affairs of state." Judging by the present display of ingratitude, the President is enhancing his own difficulties in this respect.

Building Wages

The agreement that has just been negotiated between the Building Trades Employers Association of New York City and representatives of 70 per cent of the building trades unions in that area will, for the time being, remove one serious obstacle to the placing of new contracts—that is, the uncertainty regarding labor costs. For the unions—chastened, no doubt, by fear of growing unemployment—have agreed to make no further demands for wage increases for the duration of the contract expiring June 30, 1950, unless living costs rise more than 15 per cent by April, 1949. In that case, wages would be advanced by half the excess over the 15 per cent increase.

With the conclusion of this agreement which will, it is expected, shortly be accepted by other nonparticipating unions, contractors will no longer have to pad their bids to allow for unforeseen wage increases. That will facilitate placement of contracts for municipal projects and other undertakings involving large capital expenditures over a considerable period. With wage uncertainties removed, efforts can be concentrated on reducing the excessive costs of building materials and equipment which constitute a continuing formidable deterrent to building activity.

The New York agreement not only points the way to a reasonable settlement of wage disputes in a particular industry; it suggests possibilities of similar action in other industries plagued by constant demands for wage adjustments. Through agreements to freeze wages for fairly long periods of time, with provision for adjustments in case inflation gets out of hand, one of the major causes of mounting inflation—recurrent wage increases—could be eliminated and wage increases when obtained would then represent increases in real purchasing power instead of temporary offsets to higher living costs.

Hand Of Friendship

A little imagination should make it very easy to understand the resentment with which the French cabinet Tuesday authorized Foreign Minister Bidault to sign an agreement governing the use of the interim aid which France is to receive from the United States. The aid itself is no doubt very welcome. The terms on which it was granted are such that only dire necessity could induce the French people to accept them. These terms were prescribed by the American House of Representatives which, because the appropriation of money was entailed, entered into the formulation of a foreign agreement on terms of entire parity with the Senate.

The purpose of the House in attaching certain stipulations to the granting of aid to France was, of course, not to humiliate the French but to assure that the aid would redound to the credit of the United States, as well as the benefit of France. Thus the House required the French government to use "all available media (including government press and radio) to inform the ultimate consumers as to the purpose, source, character and amounts of commodities" provided under the interim aid program. This is, as Mr. Walter Lippmann called it the other day, a provision "for compulsory gratitude." He is quite right in observing that if the situation were reversed and we were required by the French National Assembly to carry out such a stipulation it "would somehow stick in our throats."

But if it sticks in the throats of Frenchmen, its very purpose will be defeated. There is no virtue in a gift meanly given. This is something which the House, inexperienced as it is in the negotiation of foreign affairs, needs imperatively to bear in mind when it comes to framing the terms which shall govern the granting of aid under the Marshall Plan itself. If the plan is actually to bolster European morale, foster economic recovery and strengthen the sense of unity among the western democracies, then it must be given on conditions which will not offend the sensibilities of proud and sovereign peoples. Indubitably some conditions will have to be attached to our help. But these should not be so offensive as to make mendicants of the beneficiaries. Generosity in this context is likely to prove a great deal more rewarding than toughness.

Suppressed Criticism

An old lesson is given new emphasis by the German army documents captured by the invading American forces two years ago and recently made public. These documents reveal in most striking fashion the refusal of Hitler to recognize facts. Particularly in the last months of the war Hitler was living in a dream world. Field Marshals Rommel and Von Kluge knew as early as July, 1944, that Germany was beaten. Both these commanders reported to Hitler during the United States' attack in the region of Saint Lo and the British drive on Caen that the German front was about to break. Allied air power was strangling German communication lines. The Germans had lost most of their equipment, and the troops were demoralized. But Hitler ignored the facts and ordered a counteroffensive to "smash" the American positions.

Apparently Hitler thought of himself at the time as a tower of strength standing out against the defeatism of his own commanders. But a reading of the captured documents today shows how pathetically weak his position was. He tried to insulate himself against disaster by self-deception, which, of course, profoundly worsened the calamity that was ultimately to descend on Germany. Hitler was able to indulge in self-deception to the last because the system that he had imposed on Germany prevented any open criticism of his actions. Everything he did was presumed by the controlled press, radio and other propaganda agencies to be right. Consequently, mistakes went unrecognized or uncorrected until the system, and Germany along with it, had been crushed.

We have previously pointed to the acknowledgment of this critical weakness in the German system by Hitler's minister of munitions, Albert Speer. He implied in his testimony at the Nuernberg trial that Germany might have won the war if criticism of governmental policy had been allowed. In that event the correction of mistakes would have been hastened. Further evidence indicating that freedom from criticism is a costly luxury that no government can afford to indulge in, especially in wartime, has been amassed by the experts who studied Germany's and Japan's mobilization of resources and manpower on the home front.

Indeed, the experience of the dictatorial regimes in the last war seems to indicate that the suppression of criticism is a far greater danger than the occasional disclosure of confidential information that may be expected to result from continued functioning of a free press in wartime. We hope that this lesson will not be overlooked by officials who are now concerned with measures of security. Freedom to criticize based on knowledge of what is going on can, as we see from the disclosures on Germany, be a measure of security, too.

Science Committee

The Federal Government is today the principal patron of scientific research. It is a lamentable commentary on the insecurity of our times that this research is focused in the main on what is called national security—that is to say on military applications of scientific developments. It is being carried on in a great number of Federal agencies, so large a number as to create an obvious need for coordination by the Interdepartmental Committee on Scientific Research and Development which the President established the other day. Particularly because much of this research under Government auspices has to be carried on in secrecy, there is danger of wasteful overlapping. In the absence of coordination, moreover, knowledge gained in one sector might not be available to foster progress in another.

The Interdepartmental Committee should not be thought of as a substitute in any way for the National Science Foundation which it is to be hoped Congress will establish on a workable basis in its next session. Indeed, the creation of the committee points up the urgency of the foundation. For it is by no means a healthy state of affairs for so large a proportion of the country's scientific research activity to be carried on under governmental control. Save in time of war, the outstanding men of science do not care to work in Government agencies. The exodus of atomic physicists has been evidence enough of this.

Research, especially pure research which is the indispensable precursor of applied science, is far more likely to thrive in the laboratories of universities and private foundations. But these are in need of the sustenance which only a National Science Foundation can provide. The students who will be the research workers of tomorrow are in dangerously short supply because of the myopia of our draft policy during the war. A National Science Foundation is needed to encourage study in the sciences, to make it feasible for young men of talent who might otherwise be forced to pursue different careers. The Interdepartmental Committee, useful though it undoubtedly will prove, deals with only the lesser aspect of the problem outlined some months ago in the report of the President's Scientific Research Board.

Airline Losses

It may not be much consolation to airline stockholders, but the anticipated 1947 deficit of the scheduled airlines, though greater than the 1946 loss of seven million dollars, could have been substantially worse. After the string of accidents last winter and again in June, it began to look as if public confidence in air travel might be severely sapped. Since the airlines derive 85 per cent of their income from passenger fares, the prospect was gloomy. Happily, lack of public confidence is not reflected in travel statistics. The airlines have carried an estimated 7.7 per cent more passengers domestically and 35.6 per cent more on international routes than in 1946. Moreover, the domestic fatality record, while several times worse than last year, was still only 3.21 per 100 million passenger-miles.

Basically, the failure to make a profit is attributable to the same factors that affect all industries with regulated rates. Costs, both in salaries and materials, have risen faster than income. In the case of the airlines, operating revenues for the first nine months of 1947 increased 15 per cent, while operating costs advanced 21 per cent. This despite a 10 per cent fare increase granted in April and a similar raise just approved which has not yet been reflected in revenues. In calling for rate increases, the airlines, of course, must always consider the possibility that they will run into the factor of diminishing returns and that higher fares will cause traffic to fall off.

Several other causes connected with reconversion combine with higher costs to make the 1947 deficit. First of all, airlines have had to combat the effects of overexpansion. New traffic did not materialize as rapidly as some of the rosy estimates predicted. Equipment orders had to be canceled after credit had been stretched. Despite cancellations, however, the airlines did add 153 new planes during the year, at by no means negligible expense. Another factor has been the withdrawal of DC-6s from service until structural defects can be remedied. This has slowed down schedules and reduced available seats on several important lines.

There is reason to believe that the airlines are now weathering the hump of their postwar difficulties. Whether this actually proves to be so will depend on efforts to build solidly and to develop more fully such new sidelines as air freight without leaning on the economic crutch of Government subsidies. In this connection the present rates of air-mail pay, which vary greatly with individual airlines, in our opinion indicate a compelling need for mergers. As long as airlines feel that they can fall back on subsidies, regardless of operating efficiency, there will be little compulsion to consolidate and to reduce operating costs. Moreover, while there has been some improvement in safety facilities during the year despite the depredations of an economy-minded Congress, the airlines are still running on their luck. On both these points—subsidies and safety—the presidential and congressional air policy boards should have some significant recommendations.

WEATHERVANE

Breasting invisible surf of wind the golden cockerel rides,
Washed by unfathomed seas of sun and burnished by rain,
Arched for imminent crowing, but silent upon these tides
Of weather the bronze bird steers the course of his vane.

Now eastward the golden arrow pierces an iron-gray sky
Under lowering clouds and a smell of approaching snow;
Now westward into the azure air with cirrus clouds blown high
Turns the glittering bird, wings lifted, but never to crow.

High on the apex of steeple, unchanging prophet of change,
Unmindful of days or the hour's inexorable chime,
Charting his passage through stars he finds nothing strange
In the weather, who has known all sorts in his time.

Currency Hoarding

The Russian move to replace its currency should, by not too remote association, prompt us to consider certain aspects of our own currency situation, rather than to dismiss the whole thing as simply an arbitrary act of confiscation.

Some years ago the passing of a Chicago notable disclosed a hoard of $1,500,000 in cash in his safe deposit boxes. More recently, a prominent businessman left $500,000 in cash as part of his estate. Currently, merchants report that purchases of $1000 and upward are often paid for in cash. Likewise, reports of sums taken in holdups and robberies in our large cities indicate that our people keep about them many times the currency they were in the habit of keeping two decades ago. All in all, it appears obvious that the practice of hoarding ready cash has grown to vast proportions.

Since under modern conditions all known economic systems are completely dependent on money as a medium, the destructive effect of the withdrawal of so much currency from circulation on our economy could hardly, I think, be exaggerated.

Consider a concrete example. Before a refrigerator priced at $200 is ready for sale, probably $150 has been paid out for materials, labor, financing, etc. Before this refrigerator can become the property of a user, that amount must be repaid, plus the profit of the dealer.

What is true of the refrigerator is true also, it seems to me, of a nation's total production. If as a nation we produce in a given year goods and services to the value, say, of 200 billion dollars, we as producers collect payment to that amount. If, then, as consumers we spend back only 175 billion dollars and hold back 25 billion dollars, it would seem to be obvious that there can be no sale for 25 billion dollars worth of our production until that amount of new currency or credit is added to the volume remaining in circulation.

Under such conditions the maintenance of a stable currency and avoidance of inflation are a practical impossibility, even if we continue indefinitely to give away, either outright or through pretended loans, whatever portion of our production we fail to buy up ourselves.

Here we have a probable explanation of the enigmatic, but none the less historic, fact that all our periods of economic crisis and distress have been associated with congested markets resulting from our not knowing how to dispose of all we have been able to produce.

Wallace's Voice

It is painful to note your antipathy to Henry Wallace. Henry Wallace has also been discredited as a dreamer and visionary because he has the courage to advocate friendly relations with Russia as opposed to a policy whose constant factor is persecution and vilification in press and radio.

If there is any sanity left in us, let us step off the whirling squirrel-cage onto the ground, then ask ourselves if we can ever remember a time when all the people in the country thought precisely alike. After Pearl Harbor, yes. But that meant war. So does this. Here is a thought worthy of careful examination—worthy of suspicion as well.

Even England, although viewing with joy our obsession, must laugh in her sleeve at the completeness of our taking over, not only her entire empire policy, but even her hatred and persecution of Russia which was continuous between the two wars. We Americans are emotional extremists. When we adopted isolation after World War I, we did it whole-hog, leaving no stone unturned; now it is intervention to the extreme limit wherein we undertake to finance the world.

Our foreign policy in one breath proclaims pharisaically that we are feeding the hungry, caring for the children, succoring the oppressed; and on the other hand, admits boldly and publicly that we are out to "contain communism!" And if this means upholding all the Fascist and feudal regimes still scattered over the earth, so be it.

Let the glib ones who see nothing strange in the startling phenomenon of all Americans thinking exactly the same prescribed line, look to it. In the end they may find themselves speaking the name of Henry Wallace with respect just as they do Thomas Jefferson.

Overseas Jobs

Your paper on December 23 included an article entitled "Juicy Overseas Jobs A-Wasting" which, while generally accurate, contains one or two glaring inaccuracies which will mislead the reader. I know, because I have just returned from a year in Korea.

It is not true, now, that a man's family "can follow only after he has worked up through a priority list which is based on the length of overseas duty since December 7, 1941." General Hodge (lieutenant general in command in Korea) now bans travel of the families of all civilian and probably all military personnel to Korea. I returned with a CAF-14 who came back to the States because he knew he could not get his family over, even after a year's service. Others have quit and will quit for the same reason. I could name many names.

Nor is it true that you must serve two years. That was the rule for a short period but the Military Government in Korea changed all two-year contracts to one year sometime last spring, principally because it could not live up to promises made in the States. In Korea the 40-hour week applied as late as November 15 and probably still applies.

Difficulties In Restoring Europe

The gravity and complexity of the European crisis is the major repercussion of the Second World War upon American economy. The urgency of its solution bedevils all discussion of public affairs today. That the Marshall Plan may not offer the most effective answer to this problem is implied in Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's call for a Nation-wide debate of its merits by experts. The Michigan Senator apparently harbors reservations of his own regarding the plan's successful outcome. This is indicated in his recent statement to the press that he would take no position on the implementation of the European Recovery Program until all the forthcoming evidence before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had been sifted and assessed.

There is no hint of challenge, be it noted, of the good will of the ERP's sponsors, of their humanitarian intent to restore the battered fabric of the Old World to a going concern. Indeed, all are agreed that it is the sole alternative consonant with an enlightened self-interest. What seems to be in doubt are the shaky economics and wishful political perspectives of its champions. A distinguished body of minority opinion holds that the program admits of few of those happy certainties with which plain men are wont to lull their anxieties. Among other imponderables, this minority draws attention to the unpredictable current of affairs on the Continent: a current fraught with nameless social convulsions.

A major objective of the ERP is to contain the Kremlin's offensive in the East. Quoting the Harriman Report, the Economist of London, of December 13, observes that this is in accord with "America's position in the world which has been based for more than a century on the existence in Europe of a number of strong states committed by tradition and inclination to the democratic concept."

Political concepts, however desirable, are not immutable. History is adamant in demonstrating that they blossom, flourish and languish with the changing climate of economic life. Hitler and Stalin are but the brutal symbols of this polarity. As has already come to pass in the Balkans, an adverse shift of forces in states hitherto "committed to the democratic concept" could result in the loss of a sizable slice of the Marshall Plan's enormous commitments, a loss which would ultimately be used to bolster the Stalinist bridgehead westward across the Rhine. That this is not a fantastic conjecture may be gathered from the impressive influence exercised by left-wing politicos among decisive elements of the industrial proletariat in Italy and France.

To restore Europe, mainly with American funds, to even a modicum of her former virility is an undertaking as dubious in its issue as it is dismaying in magnitude. The Second World War merely accelerated the hardening of her economic arteries. Since 1913 her superior position has steadily declined. Before that time Europe commanded a wide, expanding market, huge investments abroad, a considerable merchant marine, and the relative absence of formidable commercial rivalry. Her present "blasted grandeur," presenting an obsolete competitive plant, liquidated overseas holdings, and a decimated and devitalized manpower has canceled all that.

England alone, writes Alexander L. Hood in the autumn, 1947, number of the Harvard Business Review, lost 18 million gross tons of her shipping and 25 per cent of her total prewar capital. Long before the totalitarian offensive Europe's competitive potential on the global market had been reduced 26 per cent by American industry and 24 per cent by other noncontinental countries. That is to say, technological progress outside Europe had lessened the demand for her exports. It was chiefly through the revenues from these exports that she was able to provision the densest urban population in the world.

These are but a few of the stubborn facts of which the experts are not oblivious. Because of them they foresee the bleak prospect of having to pour billions into Europe on a largely eleemosynary basis which must ultimately intolerably burden our people. Nor will we appease those intransigent elements there who refuse to believe that the bounty of the United States is being used to restore the Continent to its former glory. Europe's chief salvation lies in permitting her to supply the inexhaustible requirements of the eastern market. Avenues must be explored to achieve an amicable understanding along that line.

Wallace's Candidacy

By Mark Sullivan

Cleavage With Labor

IN ONE of many gestures toward a third party which Mr. Henry A. Wallace made during the past year, he wrote last July 3 in the New Republic, "A decade hence it is all too possible we shall say, 'The third party was conceived the day the Southern Democrats voted to override the Taft-Hartley labor bill veto.'"

Six months after that date of conception, three shorter than normal gestation takes, the third party was delivered December 29, but during the pregnancy an extraordinary change had taken place. Mr. Wallace's delivery of the third party was made in some 3000 words—but not one of the words was "Taft-Hartley" or any equivalent.

This absence of mention of the Taft-Hartley law is one of several characteristics that make Mr. Wallace's launching of his third party strange to the point of being almost inexplicable, and make the party itself, so far as any person experienced in politics can foresee, likely to stand in the history of third party movements as an exceptionally unpromising adventure. Not merely is it futile as respects any prospect of success in the sense of electing Mr. Wallace; that goes without saying. It takes away from the school of thought Mr. Wallace symbolizes substantially all possibility of practical effectiveness. Regardless of how many votes Mr. Wallace personally may get as candidate for President, it is not likely to be enough, in congressional districts, to elect any candidate who runs on his ticket and on his position of opposition to the two old parties.

BEFORE Mr. Wallace set up his third party, it was possible for his followers and lieutenants to enter Democratic primaries for nominations to Congress, and some important ones planned to do so. These are now obliged to abandon their plans or disavow the new party. But disavowal has the effect, on Democratic voters, of emphasizing the former affiliation. Former followers or lieutenants of Mr. Wallace who now seek Democratic Party nominations, will receive less credit for apostacy than handicap for the previous association, now made conspicuous and emphasized by Mr. Wallace's attack upon the party and his endangering its success nationally.

Mr. Wallace's school of thought had already suffered a split, following the defeat it received in the congressional elections of November, 1946. Before the split, now become almost disintegration, Mr. Wallace and his school of thought were strong enough to contemplate taking over the Democratic Party. At the Democratic Jefferson Day Dinner in early 1946, Mr. Wallace, then a member of the Cabinet, made the principal address, and in it implied that conservative Democrats should be read out of the party. At that time it was almost a question whether Mr. Wallace or President Truman had the real headship of the Democratic Party. Now, by Mr. Wallace's setting up of a third party, the conservative wing of the Democrats are presented with a dominance which they could not have achieved by head-on attack against Mr. Wallace in an inter-party struggle.

MUCH OF the political potency Mr. Wallace once had came from labor, especially CIO. The CIO Political Action Committee was the spearhead of the drive, almost successful to renominate Mr. Wallace for Vice President in the Democratic National Convention of 1944. During the six months since the Taft-Hartley labor law was enacted, denunciations of it and declarations that members of Congress who voted for it should be defeated have been practically universal on the part of labor leaders. Why Mr. Wallace, by silence on the Taft-Hartley law, should alienate this important group is a mystery upon which political leaders speculate.

In the sequence of events, cleavage between Mr. Wallace and labor leaders began before Mr. Wallace's speech. Events in early December which forcast a Wallace third party were followed by defections of labor leaders from him, some giving as their reason Mr. Wallace's attacks upon the foreign policy shared by the Truman Administration and the Republicans. In effect, the labor leaders took the initiative in cleavage, and this may explain Mr. Wallace's silence in his speech. In any event, the fact, bearing strongly on Mr. Wallace's prospects, is that important leaders of CIO and AFL, and of the American Labor Party, are in opposition to him.

Family Taxes

J. A. Livingston's calculations in his column of December 23 about tax exemptions, while technically accurate, presumably give a very misleading picture of the problems a family man faces.

Children eat just as much or more than adults; their clothes cost more because they wear them out faster or outgrow them. Boys' shoes have to be half-soled at least every month and new shoes purchased every few months at prices comparable to adult shoes. Doctors' and dentists' bills are equal or greater.

So a man with wife and two children whose income is $3000 a year has only $750 per person in his family while a childless couple with combined income of $3000—although they pay slightly more taxes—still have something between $1000 each or $1500 each to live on. What a difference!

This discourages having children and is a more serious menace to the future of the Nation than soil erosion or depletion of our other natural resources.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Squeeze Play

WHAT DO THE Communists really want from Henry Wallace? That is the question which Wallace's third-party candidacy poses. As Wilson Wyatt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Leon Henderson and Hubert Humphrey, leaders of the left wing Americans for Democratic Action, have pointed out, "the Communists are the machine behind the third party." The Communists, like Wallace himself, know that Wallace will never be President of the United States. Then what do they expect to get out of him?

The answer is twofold. It has been previously outlined in this space. It has now been conveniently documented in two articles published side by side in the same issue of the Daily Worker, the Communist bible, on the day Wallace coyly announced his availability. These instructions to the faithful were signed respectively by a Daily Worker political expert, Max Gordon, and by no less a person than William Z. Foster, grand panjandrum of the American Communist Party.

Mr. Gordon's effort, though hardly a prose masterpiece, is perfectly explicit, and remarkably free of the usual Communist gobbledygook. He says, in effect, that the Wallace candidacy should be used as an instrument of blackmail on the left-wing Democrats. He instructs the lower-echelon Communists who will manage the third-party machinery in the technique of effective arm-twisting.

The local Democratic politicians, he writes, "must come to some terms with this third-party movement whereby it (the Wallace party) will not file candidates of its own for all local offices." Moreover, the Democratic nominees "must conduct their campaigns in such a way as not to come into sharp collision with the mass of the pro-Wallace voters in their precincts."

MR. GORDON points out that Representative Chester Hollifield, a California liberal, has denounced the Wallace candidacy, but that Hollifield is in a virtually impregnable political position. "Other liberal Democrats," Mr. Gordon concludes, in a smugly threatening tone, "are not in that apparently secure position and so have shut up, at least for the present."

In other words, the Communists will use Wallace either to blackmail non-Communist liberals into submission, or to defeat them. If the local machines and the local nominees play along—that is, if they play the Communist game on the vital foreign policy issue—all well and good. If not, a "Wallace candidate" will suddenly emerge, thus the Communists reason, insuring the defeat of any non-Communist liberal by splitting the left-of-center vote.

A specific example of the way in which this arm-twisting technique may be expected to work may be found in the case of Prof. Paul Douglas, a liberal Democrat who has just accepted the Democratic senatorial nomination in Illinois. He will oppose Col. Robert R. McCormick's isolationist fair-haired boy, Senator C. Wayland ("Curley") Brooks. Douglas is a strong supporter of the Marshall Plan. Unless Douglas suddenly begins to soft-pedal the foreign policy issue (which he will not do), he will be confronted by a Wallace candidate. According to the Communist strategy, he will be defeated and Senator Brooks reelected.

MR. FOSTER makes it wholly clear why the election of men like Senator Brooks will not displease Mr. Foster and his followers. Mr. Foster quotes with evident approval an interview with Senator Robert A. Taft, most isolationist of the potential Republican candidates. "Today there are many indications," Mr. Foster quotes Mr. Taft, "that some Americans have become imperialists . . . But imperialism in any form has behind it the thought of using war as the instrument of foreign policy. In such thoughts there is no will to peace."

Mr. Foster comments triumphantly that this is exactly what "we have been telling the people for a long time." Senator Taft is dutifully castigated as a "reactionary," and a representative of "the capitalist interests." Yet throughout Mr. Foster's article there is an odd note of barely concealed affection for the Ohio Senator.

Thus the pretty little game which the Communists mean to play with the embittered and easily deluded Wallace becomes more clear than ever. The third-party movement is meant to insure, first, that whatever liberals and left wingers remain in Washington after November, 1948, are Communist captives, on the dreary Pietro Nenni pattern. The Wallace candidacy is meant to insure, second, that the American Government will be dominated by fatuously nostalgic isolationists who will neutralize the United States in world affairs.

It remains to be seen whether this squeeze play will work. The Communists, applying the doctrines of Marxist holy writ to the odd workings of the American democracy, have been consistently overclever. The American non-Communist liberals, with a long native tradition of American radicalism behind them, may not be easily bullied. It is hardly likely that the Republican Party, whatever the immediate political advantages, will play the Communist game. Senator Taft is in the last analysis both an intelligent man and a patriot. And the American people are not fools.

Wallace's Prospects

By Ernest Lindley

Injury Discounted

ANY ESTIMATE made now of the number of votes Henry Wallace will collect as a third candidate for President would be hardly more than a wild guess. But the prevailing view that his candidacy will seriously hurt President Truman's prospects is at least open to question. It is a view based on Wallace's former associations rather than on his present identification.

Although Wallace claims a progressive or New Deal label, no important New Dealer or close associate of the late President Roosevelt is supporting him, as yet. Many of the best-known members of the Roosevelt New Deal group have announced their opposition to him. A number of them have openly assailed the Wallace third party movement as a Communist-directed enterprise.

Wallace appears to have no support from organized labor except from unions or sub-units under the leadership of Communists or fellow-travelers. In the words of the statement issued by Americans for Democratic Action over the names of Leon Henderson, Wilson Wyatt, Mayor Hubert H. Humphrey of Minneapolis, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.: "No non-Communist leader of organized labor supports this irresponsible adventure."

For practical reasons such former New Dealers as Senator Claude Pepper of Florida and Aubrey Williams, former Deputy Administrator of WPA and head of the National Youth Administration, both of whom are sympathetic to Wallace's views on foreign policy, have announced that they will not support a third ticket. Henry Morgenthau, jr., former Secretary of the Treasury, has clarified his position. He will support Truman.

WITH NONE of the important Roosevelt New Dealers for him, and with most of them strongly against him and already denouncing his movement as Communist-inspired, it seems unlikely that Wallace will be able to draw much of the progressive or New Deal vote. He will have the Communist and fellow-traveler vote. How large this vote turns out to be will depend greatly on the ability of pro-Communist union officials to deliver their rank-and-file membership. It is not inconceivable that the Wallace candidacy will give further impetus in some unions to the movement to get rid of pro-Communist officers.

The pro-Communist vote went to Roosevelt in 1944. But in 1940 the Communists were vigorously and vociferously against him. The Nazi-Soviet pact was then in effect and Roosevelt was, to the Communists, a "Fascist warmonger." In 1936 and 1932 also the Communists had their own presidential ticket.

Apart from the pro-Communists, Mr. Wallace's candidacy is likely to make its strongest appeal to Negroes and to miscellaneous pacifists. Roosevelt took most of the Negro vote away from the Republican Party in 1936 and 1940 but by 1944 it had begun to drift back. Democratic leaders in a number of States have been pessimistic about the Negro vote in 1948. If Mr. Wallace attracts a large Negro vote, it may be at the expense of the Republicans rather than of Mr. Truman.

AS FOR the pacifists, Mr. Wallace is frank in saying that he is bidding for support from such groups as the Methodists and Quakers. "Peace" is his keynote. His approach to the subject is along traditional pacifistic lines, stemming from the vague notion that sweet reasonableness and manifestations of brotherly love will assure peace.

When Mr. Wallace goes after the traditional pacifist vote he is invading territory which is fully as much Republican as Democratic. In a good many of the Midwestern States it is almost entirely Republican. It is one of the sources of the isolationists which is to be found in the Republican membership in Congress today, especially among Senators and Representatives from such States as Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

If the Republican presidential nominee is a supporter of the foreign policy of Truman, Vandenberg and Marshall, then Wallace may seem quite attractive to the non-Communist pacifists. If the Republican nominee caters to the pacifists, as Taft has done up to a point, then Mr. Truman may be expected to pick up a good many votes from independents and Republicans who favor the Truman-Vandenberg - Marshall - Dulles policy.

Thus, there are many reasons for doubting that the Wallace candidacy will seriously injure Mr. Truman's prospects and even for thinking that, in the end, it may hurt the Republicans more than the Democrats.

Defense Plans Call for Budget Of 25 Billions by Early 1950s

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

(First of a series of three articles.)

Long-range estimates of defense costs, calling for military appropriations up to two and a half times what they are today, are facing the Nation.

An analysis of military needs prepared for Defense Secretary Forrestal concludes that America's annual arms budget will total 25 billion dollars by the early 1950s if Congress approves current Army, Navy and Air Force programs in toto.

That sum will be required to support (1) an up-to-the-minute Air Force of 70 combat groups; (2) an Army of present strength with modern weapons; (3) a Navy kept up-to-date at the strength authorized by Congress, and, (4) fully manned, drilled and equipped reserves maintained by universal military training.

See 14-Billion Minimum

Defense chiefs concede that such outlays are unlikely. They also say that a "reasonable degree of security" can be maintained for something less.

But the price tag for "reasonable security" also is huge. It is 14 to 16 billion dollars a year—roughly half again more than today.

And what is so disturbing to both Administration leaders and Republican chieftains on Capitol Hill is that the facts and figures presented are difficult to refute. They show that:

The Nation now is maintaining a 14-to-15-billion-dollar defense machine on a current outlay of 10.4 billions by living on its "fat"—i.e. war-bought stocks.

When these stocks are gone or obsolete—estimated from one to three years—we must greatly increase defense appropriations or drastically cut our present forces.

Millions Needed For Housing

Here are the facts backing up those conclusions:

1. Congress voted no money in 1947 for new housing or other construction at service posts and stations. Yet officials estimate that an average of 600 to 700 million dollars a year—in addition to maintenance and repair costs—is required to keep the present physical plant of the Army, Navy and Air Force operating.

Replacement of ancient or temporary wartime hospitals, barracks, hangars, runways, shops, drydocks, roads and wharfs can be postponed, but not ultimately avoided. They must either: (a) be replaced; (2) closed down; or (c) maintenance and repair costs will skyrocket.

2. Very little money was appropriated this year for what is known as "general supplies." This includes everything from diesel engine spares to socks. The Navy, for example, bought no clothing except some "skivvy shirts." The National Guard, but not the Regular Army, purchased uniforms. About two billion dollars will be required each year for such supplies when war stocks are depleted.

Heavy Spending on Vehicles

3. Almost nothing is being spent this year for vehicles. Yet the armed forces require huge quantities of trucks, buses and specialized motor equipment. It is estimated that from 600 to 700 million is the "normal" yearly outlay which will be required once the wartime reserve is gone.

4. New shipbuilding appropriations for the Navy this year total only 14 millions. Opinions differ as to what is required to keep the shipbuilding industry alive and the Navy modern. Some naval officials put it at 600 millions annually. Others outside the Navy propose as low as 100 millions. A probable compromise is 400 millions.

5. Current direct appropriations and contract authorizations for Air Force and Navy aircraft procurement total a little more than 900 millions. Yet the annual cost of replacing present plane strength to keep it reasonably modern is estimated at from 2¼ to 2¾ billions.

Some expansion of existing forces has been proposed. Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington recently told the President's Air Policy Commission that a "minimum air force in being" of 70 combat groups is necessary. This calls for 12,441 planes for the regular establishment, Air National Guard and Air Reserve, plus 8100 first line reserve aircraft.

He did not estimate the cost of such a force, but an Air Force spokesman later told The Washington Post that it would cost about eight billion dollars annually! Without the 8100-plane reserve, and scaled down in other ways, we might have 70-groups for about 5½ billions a year, it was said. The currently aimed-for 55-group force—maintained at strength for a full year—normally would cost about 4½ billions. This force can be maintained next year for about a billion less, using aircraft from war stocks.

Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan insisted recently that world conditions require a 500,000-man Navy, spear-headed by a naval air force of 14,500 planes. That is the fleet voted by Congress after the war.

10 Billion a Year to Navy

Later, Sullivan told The Washington Post that such a force would cost at least 5½ billion a year. He indicated that this sum included only a "prototype" shipbuilding program.

To keep such a Navy modern—with a sizable shipbuilding program providing for replacement of existing warships by new-type aircraft carriers, submarines, guided missile warships and amphibious craft would total 10 billion dollars a year!

Even maintaining the current reduced force in a normal year, with only "prototype" building, would cost over five billion. By using up the war "fat," however, the existing fleet can be kept operating next year for about four billion.

Army officials pointed out to The Post that no new weapons and equipment had been bought since the war-end, except for a few experimental types. The Army, it was said, will be practically "immobile" if a start is not made in this direction within a couple of years.

Poor Housing Hurts Recruiting

A pressing need is to replace present ack-ack guns with new-type equipment capable of shooting down jet bombers, and procure new recoilless weapons and other light equipment which is transportable by air.

There is compelling necessity for new housing at Army posts. A survey made recently showed that lack of proper quarters and barracks is the greatest cause for the lag in recruiting.

To maintain the present authorized Army in a "normal" year will cost about five billion dollars. Because a shortage of volunteers has cut the service way below strength, it will be possible to carry on the current establishment, using war stocks, at about 2.9 billions.

If UMT is adopted, and the National Guard and Reserves are boosted to aimed-for strength, Army appropriations will run much higher. Close to eight billion dollars a year would be required to maintain the present authorized Regular Army, Guard and Reserve at full strength, reasonably well-trained and equipped.

UMT to Cost 1.75 Billions

President Truman's UMT commission said the over-all annual cost of the program at full swing would cost 1¾ billion dollars. At least another billion a year would be required to train and equip the Reserve components once UMT builds them to full strength.

An aircraft warning network for the United States—which many officials say is vital—would cost another 250 million to install and upward of 100 million to maintain.

Totaling these astronomical estimates, Administration and congressional leaders want to know whether there is any other way out. Can we have security without a 50 per cent boost in defense spending? The problem is not an emergency one. The 1949 budget will about equal this year's. But it must be faced soon.

The Gallup Poll

Democrats Hold Slight Lead In Illinois '48 Preference

What is the political sentiment in the leading States as 1948 opens? As already reported, the Gallup Poll has found New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio leaning Democratic, and Michigan leaning Republican. Today's poll covers Illinois.

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 1.—Illinois, key area of the Midwest, third largest State in number of electoral votes, is today almost evenly divided in its party preference for the crucial 1948 presidential election.

State-wide polling by the Institute finds the Prairie State, which went Democratic in the last four presidential elections, leaning Democratic again now but only by the slimmest of margins. The State has 28 electoral votes.

When Illinois voters were asked, "If a presidential election were held today, which party would you vote for—the Democratic or the Republican?" this is the way they voted:

Democratic	51%
Republican	49

This vote compares with the trend in recent years as follows:

ILLINOIS TREND
(Presidential Elections)

	Dem.	Rep.
1932	56.8%	43.2%
1936	59.2	40.8
1940	51.2	48.8
1944	51.7	48.3
Today	51.0	49.0

Today's poll does not constitute a forecast of the outcome in Illinois next November. Extensive further polling will be conducted at intervals to measure the trend of sentiment as the presidential campaign progresses.

Today's results indicate basic party strength irrespective of candidates. In the last 10 years such polls have shown a high degree of accuracy in measuring political sentiment in presidential elections.

Illinois is the fifth large State whose political sentiment at present has been reported by the Institute. The results in the others follow:

	Dem.	Rep.
New York	53%	47%
Pennsylvania	51	49
Ohio	51	49
Michigan	47	53

Illinois has the distinction of ranking first in the country in voting participation. In both 1944 and 1940 the Illinois vote was the equivalent of 53 per cent of its total population, with New Hampshire and New York next with 51 per cent. In 1940 the proportion of citizens of voting age in Illinois who voted was 82 per cent.

Traditionally, as every resident of the State knows, the Chicago area goes Democratic, while the down-State area is Republican. This tug-of-war between the two parts of the State has meant that Illinois is not easily classifiable as regularly Republican, although the GOP has enjoyed a slight advantage. In the last 12 presidential elections the State went Democratic five times, Republican seven.

Blind Man Hangs Self in Killing Of Housekeeper

Philadelphia, Jan. 1 (AP).—Blind William Neithamer took his life today completing the deed he first attempted two weeks ago.

The coroner's office said the 37-year-old vendor of pencils hanged himself with a sheet in the jail cell where he was held for shooting to death his housekeeper, Mrs. Anna Austin, 67.

Neithamer walked into a police station December 16 and said he had shot Mrs. Austin because he feared she might become a burden to him as his invalid wife, who died two months earlier, had been.

Two empty cartridges were in the gun and the blind man said he had planned to use the second on himself. But in the excitement of shooting the housekeeper as she slept, he fired both bullets.

Export Franc Is Discussed By Ministers

Paris, Jan. 1 (AP).—Premier Robert Schuman conferred for six hours today with a group of cabinet ministers and financial experts reportedly on the possibility of creating an "export franc" distinct from the nation's regular currency.

Prior to today's meeting, Schuman told newsmen his government had not yet discussed officially a second franc, designed to stimulate French exports to the dollar zone. He admitted, however, the matter had been discussed unofficially by his ministers, but that no action had been taken.

A finance ministry spokesman said France first would have to obtain permission from members sttaes of the World Bank in Washington. Such permission has not yet been requested, the spokesman said.

Private financial sources said Finance Minister Rene Mayer had made up his mind to insist on the measure to permit French exporters to compete in dollar markets.

France's exports to the dollar area declined from 13 per cent of all foreign trade to 9 per cent during the past year when exports totaled 18,199,696,000 francs (about 170 million dollars).

These financial sources said Mayer was considering setting the dollar value of the export franc at somewhere between 240 to 280, as compared with the present official rate of slightly more than 119 to the dollar.

The government, meanwhile, completed the first part of its widespread economic and financial program when it published a number of decrees permitting increased prices on a number of commodities and granting wage increases in some cases up to 24 per cent.

Curtain Talk

Tito, Groza Rally Leftists To 'Victory'

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Leaders of Iron Curtain countries of eastern Europe condemned "imperialism"—meaning the United States—in New Year broadcasts today and called on "democrats" to make 1948 a year of victory.

Premier Petru Groza of the new Romanian popular republic expressed sympathy with the "anti-imperialist" struggles of leftist peoples all over the world.

Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, in his New Year broadcast, emphasized internal problems and warned "careless and holidaying" workers that their food rations would be cut off unless they behaved.

Groza said that establishment of the Romanian republic was the crowning achievement of 1947 and that the country started the new year with a form of government "best suited to its national aspirations."

Romanians, he continued, watch with sympathy the struggles in France, Italy, China, Indonesia and Spain between "the forces of progress, democracy and peace on one side and imperialist forces which want to prepare a new disaster for nations on the other."

Tito said Yugoslavia exceeded its 1947 production quota by 4 per cent despite deficiencies in coal and some other products. But, he emphasized:

"There are people who do not want to work . . . Many governing officials treat workers carelessly and unscrupulously. Insufficient care is being paid to housing problems . . . Diligent workers remain unrewarded . . . There is much of such deficiency and all must be eliminated . . ."

Marshall Named Man of the Year

London, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall, was named as man of the year today in the "Daily Express" poll of public opinion.

The poll, which claims to represent a cross section of British opinion, placed Winston Churchill second and President Truman third.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—Greedy eyes were fastened on Bobby Layne today by George Halas of the Chicago Bears, and Coach Cecil Isbell of the Baltimore Colts, who watched from the stands as Layne had himself a day in the Sugar Bowl.

POVICH

Layne was hiking the price on himself with his superb performance this afternoon, preliminary to conferences tonight with the two pro clubs which hold the draft rights to him.

And conversely, Harry Gilmer of Alabama, unable to untrack himself and suffering the worst day of his college football career, did not strengthen his own bargaining position for his plunge into pro football.

Redskin Coach Turk Edwards, here to sign Gilmer if he can, may not be disposed now to outbid the Brooklyn club of the All-America Conference which has also claimed Gilmer in the draft. Certainly he saw nothing in Gilmer today to presuppose that the 'Bama boy would be a fitting successor to Sammy Baugh.

FOOTBALL MEN MAKE allowances, though, and are tolerant of the stars who have a bad afternoon. Edwards already has conferred with Gilmer, who has indicated he would like to play with the Redskins, and price is now the only issue.

But a new factor has cropped up that may stymie the Redskins' attempts to sign Gilmer. A sudden appearance in New Orleans was made today by Branch Rickey, who, according to private reports, is making ready to take over the impoverished Brooklyn football club and came here for the express purpose of signing Gilmer.

In Rickey, the Redskins are confronted with no mean bargaining opponent. His persuasive talents are well known, and instead of bidding against a finance-starved Brooklyn club, the Redskins are now in competition against a well-heeled outfit, if Rickey is indeed moving in as boss of the Brooklyn football team.

THERE IS SOME bitterness, incidentally, among the college coaches of the bowl teams, against the pro football people who visit their training camps on the eve of the important bowl games and talk pro contracts with the college stars. One coach today declared it was unfair to the colleges for the pros to distract their lads with pro offers and that "they ought to have the politeness to stay away from our kids until the game is over, at least."

There is no certainty that the Bears will outbid the Baltimore team for Layne's services, either, despite the high affluence of the Bears and the fact that Baltimore lost $150,000 in its operation last season. Coach Isbell and Owner Bob Rodenberg are prepared to overpay for Layne as a measure of keeping the faith with Baltimore fans who supported the club in its poor 1947 season.

Pittsburgh claimed Layne in the National Football League draft but it is no secret that the rights to Layne were traded to the Chicago Bears despite denials by both clubs. Halas is not talking to Layne on behalf of the Pittsburgh club you may be sure.

IF IT IS THE BEARS who finally come up with Layne then it will be bitter irony for the Chicago Cardinals, crosstown rivals of Halas' team.

Layne is a T-formation quarterback of the type the Bears always seek, and it was Phil Handler, coach of the Cardinals, who groomed him in the art of playing the T-formation. Handler, a Texas graduate, was engaged last spring to help Texas make the transformation from Dana Bible's single wing to the T-formation preferred by Coach Blair Cherry.

But even on the day when Gilmer was far overshadowed by Layne, the Alabama boy set a record for bowl history. He made good with his first two passes of the day to run his Sugar Bowl completions to 10 straight. Four years ago he completed eight out of eight against Duke in the Sugar Bowl. You'd have to say he still has a pretty high potential.

Perry Beaten By Stellato

Frankie Stellato, 126-pound Marine Corps East Coast champion, defeated Cubby Perry of Police Boys Club last night in a Senior Division bout on the Golden Gloves second round program last night before more than 2000 spectators at Uline Arena.

Cubby, kid brother of Aaron Perry, former local welterweight contender, had a slight lead over the Quantico entry going into the last round, but Stellato began landing with short damaging rights in the third round to gain the edge.

In the best of the novice division contests, Blonde Carl Almgren of Apollo A C decisioned Bob Howard of Merrick. It was a wild-swinging fight all the way. Almgren got the nod by scoring a first-round knockdown for a count of 8 and a third-round knockdown for six.

Lu Gambino Gets All 3 Terp Scores

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 1.—Maryland's Lu Gambino played a great game of football today, but Georgia packed a last-quarter punch that enabled the Bulldogs to come from behind and gain a 20-20 tie in the Gator Bowl.

Big baldish Gambino scored all three of Maryland's touchdowns and the Terrapins had what appeared to be a safe 20-7 lead at the end of the third period.

Up to that point, Maryland's play had been almost brilliant as the game's setting, with a holiday throng of 21,000 in the stands, 16 bands playing, a dozen flower-bedecked floats circling the field and a curvaceous bowl queen waving greetings to one and all.

Then Georgia, led by its brilliant passer, Johnny Rauch, threw everything it had left into a desperate effort to preserve its record of never having lost in a bowl game.

On Terps' 4-Yard Line at End

The electrified Bulldogs not only tied up the score, but they came mighty close to winning, having the ball on Maryland's 4-yard line when the final gun sounded.

Rauch was superb in sweeping the Georgians up to a tie, but it was Gambino who held the center of the stage much of the exciting afternoon.

Running with crushing power, yet with swiftness, the bald touchdown-maker ripped off 157 of Maryland's 247 yards gained rushing. Gambino carried the ball 19 times.

His best sprint was a 35-yard gallop in the second period which staked the fighting Terps to a 6-0 lead.

A Hole in Line and He's Gone

Taking the ball on a handoff from Sub Quarterback Joe Tucker, Gambino bulled his way through the right side of the Georgia line. There he found an opening, darted into the clear and the next thing the crowd saw of Gambino was his back as he raced to a touchdown.

His sensational run climaxed a 75-yard march which Maryland covered in five plays.

Freshman Johnny Idzik got the Terps going with a 26-yard run through the middle, then two more jaunts of 6-yards each which brought the ball to the Bulldog 35. There Gambino took over.

Guard Tom McHugh kicked the extra point, but he was to miss the next one, the same as Georgia's Joe Geri did later, and those two inaccuracies eventually caused the game to end in a tie.

Maryland's first touchdown followed a Georgia penetration to the Terp 13 where, on fourth down, Tackle Chet Gieriula smothered Rauch, back to pass, for a 12-yard loss.

Georgia charged right back after Gambino's first tally to within 4 yards of a touchdown, but the Terps held again.

Georgia Tech Beats Kansas By 20 to 14

Miami, Fla., Jan. 1 (AP).—Georgia Tech's Engineers beat the Kansas Jayhawkers, 20-14, in the Orange Bowl here today as the Jayhawkers tossed their golden opportunity out of the window in the final two minutes of play.

A fumble on the Tech 1-yard stripe by quarterback Lynne McNutt was recovered by Tech's Rollo Phillips. A touchdown would have given Kansas a tie, with the chance of victory hinging on the extra point.

Dixie Bowl:

Late Arkansas Rally Defeats W&M, 21-19

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Legion Field, Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 1.—William and Mary's Southern Conference champions couldn't stand prosperity here today and Arkansas twice came from behind to inaugurate the Dixie Bowl with a 21-19 victory in a bitterly contested game.

The oft-beaten Southwest Conference representatives put over their winning score in the last six minutes before the 25,000 who enjoyed a thrilling contest on a balmy New Year's Day. Although rain had been predicted, it was played under sunny skies with the temperature at 55.

William and Mary, seven-point underdog, outrushed the Razorbacks but had no answer for three quick scoring thrusts.

Arkansas Gamble Is Good

After the William and Mary Indians blew a 13-0 lead, they fought back to go ahead again at 19-14 and appeared to have the game in hand when Buddy Lex got off a 60-yard boot that rolled all the way to the Arkansas three.

The Razorbacks, gambling desperately, faked a kick and Aubrey Fowler passed from his end zone. The ruse failed but Arkansas came right back with a successful performance.

This time Fowler hit Fullback

Penn State's Comeback Ties SMU, 13 to 13

By Wilbur Martin

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP).—Penn State's Nittany Lions spotted Southern Methodist two touchdowns, then fought doggedly for a 13-13 tie here today in the twelfth annual Cotton Bowl classic.

All-America Doak Walker sparked the Mustangs to a 13-0 lead, connecting on a long, high pass to Paul Page for 53 yards and a first-quarter touchdown and then bullying through the line 3 yards for another late in the second period.

The Mustang star, celebrating his twenty-first birthday today, converted the extra point after the first touchdown.

The Lions—one of the few undefeated, untied teams in the country—came charging back after the kickoff and, with only 18 seconds to play in the second quarter, Elwood Petchel tossed a 37-yard scoring pass to Larry Cooney. Ed Cjekaj kicked the extra point.

A crowd of 47,000 watched Penn State use its devastating ground game to set up both its touchdowns, then switch to the air to score.

The second tally came just before the third period ended. Petchel connecting this time with Wally Triplett deep in the Southern Methodist end zone on a play covering 4 yards. Cjekaj missed the extra point.

Inch From Touchdown

Penn State had been denied a touchdown three plays before it scored its final tally. The Lions drove to the 1-inch line before Southern Methodist stiffened.

Southern Methodist, Southern Conference Champion, failed to come through with its aerial circus until late in the game, with Penn State, one of the leading exponents of ground attack, taking to the air.

The Mustangs scored the second time they gained the ball. Walker picked up 15 yards on the ground in this drive, then shot a high, long pass that Page caught on the dead run on the Penn State 13, scoring stading up.

Sugar Bowl Rose Bowl

Wolverines' Chappuis Shocks Trojans; Layne Great in Tide's Rout

Gilmer Failure As Rival Stars

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New Orleans, La., Jan. 1.—Blond-haired Bobby Layne was the sweetest item in the Sugar Bowl today, and before 72,000 close-packed fans Texas University raced to a 27-7 victory over Alabama's frustrated football team.

Layne passed to one of Texas' four touchdowns, scrambled with the ball to another, and made high mockery of his long-awaited duel with Harry Gilmer of Alabama.

Up from the obscurity of line play came three Texas substitutes to lend Layne a powerful hand with the demolition of Alabama's Sugar Bowl hopes.

On a kick blocked by Tackle George Petrovich and recovered in the end zone by Guard Victor Vasicek, Texas bolted out of a 7-7 tie in the third quarter and launched its rout of the Crimson Tide.

Layne, Gilmer Poles Apart

And in the fourth quarter it was another substitute, End Lewis Holder, who intercepted one of Gilmer's passes for Texas' third touchdown and a bit later downed a Gilmer fumble to set up the fourth.

But it was Layne, panicking 'Bama with his passes and running the ball on bootleg plays from his quarterback post in the T-formation, who was the transcendant figure on a day when his supposed opposite number, Gilmer, was sadly inadequate.

Layne was the game's leading gainer even at rushing the ball.

Gilmer, rushed remorselessly by the Texas line, experienced the worst day of his career in the 'Bama backfield, completing only three of the 12 passes he threw.

Texas' big third touchdown was a Gilmer pass that boomeranged into Holder's interception, and Texas' fourth touchdown stemmed from a Gilmer fumble on the 5-yard line.

'Bama End "Steals" Score

The 'Bama line averted an even more crushing defeat for the Crimson Tide, stopping Texas' running game once on the 1-foot line, and turning back two other Texas threats inside the 10-yard line.

Even on Alabama's one scoring play, a 6-yard pass by Gilmer, the Crimson Tide quarterback was made to look good only by a sen-

Weisenburger's Power Factor

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP).—Michigan's modern magicians of the gridiron, turning back the calendar to 1902 when a "point-a-minute" Ann Arbor team launched the first tournament of Roses football spectacle, shattered a game but completely outclassed University of Southern California team today, 49 to 0. It was the same score registered in that first historic engagement.

Pulling touchdown rabbits out of the air and off the ground with the ease and brilliance of true artists in a record-breaking performance that left a capacity crowd of 93,000 awe-struck, the Merlins of Michigan not only continued the Big Nine mastery over the Pacific Coast conference in this thirty-fourth edition of the Rose Bowl series, but . . .

Broke the modern Rose Bowl record for scoring.

Handed the once vaunted Trojans the worst defeat in 60 years of football at the school.

Eclipsed the 38-7 trouncing Notre Dame's great Irish inflicted on USC last December 6, thus lodging a bid for the mythical collegiate football championship of the Nation.

Display Titular Class

Striking with coolness and the confidence of champions, the Maize and Blue from Ann Arbor scored once in the first five minutes of the game, twice in the second and once in the third.

Then with old-time Rose Bowl observers hoping, then calling for more, the Wolverines went on to burst across the Trojan goal line three times in the final quarter to tie the 49-0 record score hung up by the late Fielding H. Yost's great eleve nover Stanford in the first New Year's Day classic of the Tournament of Roses.

The Troys fought all the way, but the Michigans' defensive forces, matchin gthe strength and precision of the offensive eleven, bottled up USC throughout the game except for one drive.

The Trojans generated a 75-yard ground march in the second quarter that swept on to the Michigan 13, then a pass was intercepted and USC's only trip of the entire game across the 50-yard stripe ended in disappointment.

Coach Fritz Crisler fielded a smooth running outfit, and powered it yith four of the greatest backs who ever appeared in this game as a team combination—Bob Chappuis, Jack Weisenburger, Howard Yerges and Chalmers Elliott.

With them was a deadly array of blockers, and backing this attacking force was a defensive unit that struck gloom and eventual doom to Trojan dreams.

Michigan broke the yards gained record in this display of sleight-of-hand and deception—491 yards gained by land and air, as compared to the previous record of 427 set by USC over Pitt in 1930, when the previous high scoring mark of modern times was set, USC's 35-0 over Pitt.

Three for Weisenburger

Fullback Weisenburger hit the score board for three touchdowns and Chappuis pitched two scoring strikes—one to Elliott, another to Yerges.

Little Gene Derricotte scored on the longest play of the day, a brilliant reception of a pass from Hank Fonde good for 45 yards, and End Dick Rifenburg scored on a pass from Yerges for 29 yards.

James Brieske, the place kicking specialist, had the biggest perfect day in Rose Bowl annals—converting on all of the seven touchdowns.

A tremendous cheer went up when he booted the last one.

In the days of the 1902 Michigans, touchdowns counted only five points.

Now 14 in Row for Michigan

The victory ran Michigan's uninterrupted string, dating back to the 1946 season, to 14. The defeat was the Trojans' second in a row in the Rose Bowl, Alabama whipping them in 1946, and their second in 10 appearances in the spectacle.

Chappuis' passing yards gained, 188, fell just short of the record set last year by Ernie Case of ULCA at 192.

Chappuis registered a total of 279 yards running and passing, believed to be a modern individual record, and was accorded a huge ovation—as was the entire Michigan team—when the battel was over.

Trojan backers, never mincing lavish praise on the visitors, nontheless gave their lads, and Coach Jeff Cravath, a warm farewell as they trudged off the scorched-by Michigan turf.

How Michigan Made Its Scores

1. Weisenburger, 1 yeard, ending a 63-yard drive in 11 plays.

2. Weisenburger, 1 yard, climaxing a 59-yard drive in eight plays.

3. Elliott, 11 yards, on a jump pass from Chappuis, winding up 33 yards accomplished in eight plays.

4. Yerges, on an 18-yard pass from Chappuis which followed Michigan's recovery of a USC fumble on the 18-yard line.

5. Weisenburger, 1 yard, 64 yards in six plays, sparked by Chappuis' 38-yard run, longest ground play of the game.

6. Derricotte, on a pass from Fonde, good for 45 yards, caught on the 25 yard sideline stripe.

7. Rifenburg, on a pass from Yerges, good for 29 yards.

Victors Roll Up Record Series Score

San Francisco, Jan. 1 (AP).—All-America Johnny Lujack closed out his college football career in brilliant fashion today when he pitched and engineered the East to a 40-to-9 victory over the West in the twenty-third charity game between gridiron stars gathered from all parts of the country.

A crowd of 60,000 fans, who sat through a steady drizzle, saw the great Notre Dame quarterback drive his teammates to four touchdowns and score one himself as the East defeated the bulky Westerners in the biggest rout in the history of the classic.

The West scored first, a touchdown within the first 6 minutes after the kickoff, but the show was an all-Eastern affair thereafter.

It was Lujack hitting his receivers with accurate passes, outtricking the opposition on the ground and doing the punting.

West Scores On Pass

The West scored on plunges and a final 11-yard pass from Quarterback Virgil Eikenberg of Rice to Right End Gail Bruce of Washington, but then the East started rolling.

Lujack took the kickoff for a 22-yard return to the East 35. He threw passes for 13 and 7 yards to Mihajlovich, and then whipped the ball to Left End Bill Swiacki, Columbia, over the goal line.

Ventan Yablonski, Columbia fullback, who found the range on later touchdowns, missed the try for point from placement.

Eastern superiority was demonstrated for the next three periods. Shortly before the first half ended, the East moved t he ball from its own 23 to a touchdown, Lujack throwing to Bobby Sullivan, left half from Holy Cross, in the end zone.

In the third, Lujack called only ground plays on a scoring series that saw Earl Maves, right half from Wisconsin, crack right tackle for the last yard and the third East touchdown.

The West scored its other two points on a safety when Fullback Bill Luongo, Pennsylvania, was tripped behind his own line.

The Eastern stars ran through the weary Westerners in the final period for three touchdowns. One climaxed a 54-yard drive and saw Lujack fool the opposition by dashing 8 yards around right end to score standing up. The West had expected a pass.

Fitzgerald of Yale, who played well during the short time he was in the game, later mixed passes and ground attacks to work the ball to the 8-yard marked, from where he passe dto Mihajlovich, who made a one-handed catch over the goal. That made it 33-9.

Bob Sbith, left half from Iowa, cracked tackle for the final score after a 53-yard drive.

Lujack Outstanding

The San Francisco, Jan. 1 (AP).—Johnny Lujack, All-America quarterback from Notre Dame, today was voted overwhelmingly the outstanding player in the East-West game.

The vote, by members of the Northern California Football Writers' Association, gave Lujack 26 first places out of 30 ballots cast. Ventan Yablonski, fullback from Columbia, was second choice and Herman Wedemeyer of St. Mary's, left half for the West, was third.

GEORGIA BULLDOG STOPPED—Maryland's line played a stout game against Georgia in the 'Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., yesterday. In this picture, Fullback Floyd Reid of Georgia is brought down for no gain by a fine tackle by End Francis Evans of Maryland. Halfback Jim LeRue of Maryland is No. 14. The teams fought to a 20-20 tie onds before, using nine ground plays to move from the Southern Methodist 47-yard line to this point. Petchel, one of Penn State's finest performers today, kicked to the Mustangs midway in the second quarter and the Ponies started to roll from their own 37-yard line.

Frank Payne picked up 2 yards, then Johnson passed to Zohn Milam for eight. McKissick made three, then a Johnson to Howard Parker pass netted three.

On the next play McKissick drove through the Penn State line and carried three Lions the last 5 yards of a 19-yard gain.

Walker cracked right tackle for the touchdown the next attempt.

Pen State's Francis Rogel stole the show during the game's closing minutes but on the Lions' first touchdown it was all Petchel—pitching six passes, connecting on three of them with the last paying off.

Bob Hicks snagged Petchel's first aerial for 18 yards to start the surge.

The big Penn State line, which yielded an average of just 17 yards rushing per game this year, began to click in the second half. It paved the way for Rogel's seven carries and three by Petchel on a 44-yard drive that ended 1 inch short.

Petchel returned Ed Green's short punt 27 yards to the Mustang 9-yard line, where Rogel picked up 5 yards in two attempts before Pechtel uncorked his touchdown pass to Triplett.

Southern Methodist's line could not hold the hard-charging Penn State forwards very often in the fourth period—the quater Johnson and Walker started to pass in earnest.

Walker intercepted a Petchel pass with less than two minutes to go and Johnson passed the Mustangs from their own 49-yard line to the Penn State 35-yard line before his luck ran out.

The Lions piled up 258 yards on total offensive, 93 yards of it in the air.

Southern Methodist gained 114 of its 206 yards in the air, the touchdown pass accounting for nearly half the total.

by Fullback Floyd Reid, carried to the 9.

Georgia could gain only 5 yards in four tries. Tucker, Tackle Jim Goodman and End Elmer Wingate were the Maryland heroes of that stand.

The Bulldogs tied it up before five minutes of the third period had been played. Rauch, himself, scored it, going over on a sneak from one yard out. Georgia went 68 yards for this one, mostly on the ground.

Johnny Donaldson, Stan Nestorak, and Bobby Walston ate up most of the yardage. Idzik gave the Bulldogs a break when he interfered with Edwards on a fourth-down pass over the goal.

With first down and only 12 inches away from the tieing touchdown, Rauch went over on the first crack and Geri's kick made it 7-7.

Terrapins Drive 80 Yards

Then the offensive battle reached its dizziest height. Geri booted the ball on the kickoff over the goal and Maryland went to work, covering 80 yards this trip, most of it in the air, for touchdown No. 2.

Turyn completed four straight passes, the last to End Frank Evans who was dropped on the one-yard line.

Gambino bowled over the Georgia right tackle for the score. Turyn fumbled the snap from center and McHugh's kick was blocked.

Rauch started pitching and one of his passes indirectly enabled Maryland to register its final tally. Edwards made a circus catch of a Rauch toss on the Bulldog 40, but fumbled and McHugh pounced on the football.

Three plays later, Gambino had done it again. He traveled 13 yards and Jim Larue followed with a 3-yard gain to the 24.

Fine Catch By Gambino

Sophomore Back Johnny Baroni entered the picture at this juncture. Primed for this game, Baroni came through perfectly, passing to Gambino, who leaped between two Georgia defenders to make a jumping catch on the 2-yard line. The Bam just waltzed the rest of the short way. McHugh's kick was good this time.

That ended the scoring for the third quarter and also for Maryland, but not for Georgia, not by a long shot.

With Reid and Geri pounding away, the Georgians drove 61 yards. Geri capped the drive by going over from the 4-yard line. Geri's kick was wide and it was Maryland 20, Georgia 13.

If this upset the Terps, they didn't show it. They took the next kickoff and apparently were headed for another touchdown, but Georgia Center Gene Chandler halted them when he intercepted a Baroni pass on the Bulldog 20.

Excellent Play Goes for Naught

Turyn sent the Old Liners 59 yards up the field to launch the abortive offense with a beaut of a pass to Gambino, who caught the ball much in the manner of an outfielder going deep for a long fly.

Two plays later Chandler messed up Maryland's march with his interception.

Only three minutes were left when Georgia struck to tie it up.

Back to punt on fourth down, Earl Roth fumbled the high snap from center and couldn't get a kick off. The Bulldogs took over on the Maryland 33 and Rauch went to work.

He completed three short passes to Edwards, Reid and Donaldson, then sent Reid through the middle for an 8-yard burst which carried Georgia to the 14.

Georgia Onside Kick Works

Once again Rauch went back to pass. Donaldson, running wide to his right, eluded the Terp defender and was all by himself as he hauled in Rauch's pass over the goal line. Geri came through to make it 20-20 and the crowd was going wild.

Disaster almost overtook Maryland on the next kickoff. The Bulldogs tried an onside kick and it worked. Walston's low boot smacked Brasher of Maryland on the leg and Guard Tommy Pope claimed the ball for Georgia on the Maryland 49.

There were only 50 seconds left now and the action got hotter and hotter. Both teams rushed subs in at a feverish pitch, Maryland with defensive stalwarts and Georgia with its offensive best.

Buck Bradberry made 2 for the Bulldogs and Rauch passed to Gene Lorendo for 11. Reid ran to the 24 and Rauch pitched to Geri for 10.

Geri then ran to the 4 and just as the Bulldogs were lining up for the last play, the gun went off.

Kansas Fumble Aids Ga. Tech To Win, 20-14

see a fumble black out their chances.

Monroe recovered Allen Bowen's fumble on the Tech 42 and with five minutes to play the Jayhawkers hit the line twice and McNutt passed to End Otto Schnellbacher on the Tech 27 Schnellbacher then took McNutt's pass on the Tech 10 and All-America Ray Evans drove to the 2. Tech was penalized for a time out, putting the ball on the 1. With a touchdown apparently in the making, McNutt fumbled and Phillips recovered.

The favored engineers, who lost only to Alabama during their regular season, were the first to score in the second period after a slow first quarter in which neither team offered a threat.

The touchdown was on a 26-yard pass play from Still to Jim Patton, who caught the ball in the end zone. The march began when George Mathews took Frank Pattee's kick on the Kansas 40 and returned it to the Jayhawker 26. Bob McCoy picked up 2 and Patton's pass was broken up. But on the next play, Still made it good for the score. Bowen placekicked to give Tech a 7-0 lead in five minutes of the second.

Start Long March

The Jayhawkers, hitting with renewed vigor, started a 65-yard march with Evans scoring from the 12 after smashing through right guard. Don Fambrough's kick found the uprights to even the score.

The parade started at the Kansas 35 with Bill Hogan passing to Schnellbacher to the Kansas 48 for a first down. Forrest Griffith raced to the Tech 40 and Evans picked up 5. Griffith plunged twice to the Tech 29 and Hogan passed to Bud French who was knocked out of bounds on the 12. Evans hit right guard to score.

Georgia Teoh captured the lead in the third by taking the Kansas kickoff and moving 94 yards to score when Still found Billy Queen wide open on the 7-yard line and he ran the rest of the way to score. Bowen's kick again was good.

Tech quickly added another when Ray Smith intercepted Tom Scott's pass on the Kansas 36. Three plays later, George Brodnax caught a pass from Still and ran to the 11. Bowen plunged to the 6 and Still attempted to pass, but elected to run and moved the ball to the Kansas 4. Bowen was stopped and, on fourth down and 5 to go, Still passed to Patton over the goal line where Vasicek pounced on it for the score that put Texas in front, 14-7.

Alabama never got back in the ball game. Layne put 'em deep in their own territory, faking a handoff and then hiding the ball on his hip to scamper 35 yards to the Alabama 7.

'Bama Holds on 1-Foot Line

When the 'Bama line braced, Layne attempted a placekick from the 21 that was wide. Again Layne took Texas into touchdown territory with superb passes to Blount and Bumgardner for 15 and 23 yards, and offside play by 'Bama gave Texas a first down on the 'Bama 5.

The 'Bama line stopped Canady twice, and on fourth down stopped him again, to take over the ball on their own 1-foot line.

The game broke wide open a bit later. Gilmer, aiming a pass at Tew from his own 9, was far off his mark and the ball settled into the eager arms of Holder who scampered like a jackrabbit down the sidelines for 25 yards and Texas' third touchdown.

Layne Goes Over

Alabama received the next kickoff and in five plays Texas scored. Petrovich rushed Gilmer for a 10-yard loss on a passing attempt and when Gilmer shifted to a running game, Holder hit him so hard at left end he fumbled and Holder recovered on the 'Bama 5.

Layne then snaked to the 1, but an offside penalty put Texas back on the 'Bama 9.

Layne faked a hand-off and took the ball himself around right end for 8½ yards and on the following play he sneaked it through center for Texas' fourth touchdown with only two minutes remaining.

sational maneuver by his end Ed White, who virtually stole the touchdown for 'Bama.

Gilmer's pass was intercepted on the goal line by Jim Canady, Texas halfback, and wrested away from him by White in a tussle in the end zone.

The statistics show how completely Texas took charge, especially in the second half, when Alabama failed to pierce the Texas 45-yard line until the last two minutes of play.

Texas Monopolizes Ball

The figures show Texas controlled the ball for 74 plays, while Alabama had it for only 34.

Layne served notice of his passing skill the second time Texas gained the ball, connecting with three of the first four passes on a 75-yard march that consumed only 10 plays.

He pitched a 49-yarder to Pyle on the 'Bama 17, and then ate up a 7-yard chunk with a flanker pass to Canady. From 5 yards out he found Blount in the end zone for the first touchdown.

Gilmer was a luckless guy on the final play of the first quarter when he tore off 17 yards past midfield, only to stumble and fall with blockers and a clear field ahead. He took 'Bama to the Texas 25 before missing a fourth-down pass to Cain.

Canady Averts Shutout

A 35-yard punt return by Moseley launched the tying touchdown for 'Bama midway in the second quarter, and Noonan breached the Texas line for important gains of 8 and 12 yards before White grabbed Gilmer's touchdown pass away from Canady of Texas.

Layne's passes took Texas deep into 'Bama territory in the third quarter before Texas lost the ball, and Moseley was sent in to punt out of danger.

Out of the Texas line bolted Petrovich with amazing suddenness to smother Moseley's boot and the ball rolled free into the end zone where Vasicek pounced on it for the score that put Texas in front, 14-7.

Alabama never got back in the ball game. Layne put 'em deep in their own territory, faking a handoff and then hiding the ball on his hip to scamper 35 yards to the Alabama 7.

Layne faked a hand-off and took the ball himself around right end for 8½ yards and on the following play he sneaked it through center for Texas' fourth touchdown with only two minutes remaining.

Washburn Whips, Lawrence, 54 to 35

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 1 (AP).—The Washburn University Ichabods ran wild in the last half today to defeat Lawrence College of Appleton, Wis., 54-35, in the opening game of the Beloit College holiday invitational basketball tournament.

The Topeka, Kans., team, pretournament favorite, held a narrow 21-19 halftime margin, but with Bob Powell and Duane Melvin sitting the nets in the final period, pulled away to win easily.

After the Whistle Comments

'I Had My Worst Day, Harry Gilmer Says; Cravath Still Likes Irish Over Michigan

New Orleans, Jan. 1 (AP).—Harry Gilmer, the goat of Alabama's humiliating loss to Texas today in the Sugar Bowl, admitted after the game that "I had my worst day."

His coach, Harold (Red) Drew, agreed that the entire team had a "bad day" and praised the Longhorns' throwing ace, Bobby Layne.

Drew and Texas Coach Blair Cherry agreed that a kick blocked midway the third period was the turning point in the game. Cherry added "of course, Layne played his usual magnificent game."

The Alabama coach said he thought Ray Richeson, his own right guard, was the best lineman on the field.

Max Bumgardner, who co-captained Texas and played a great game at left end, said Alabama was tough to play physically, but it wasn't the best team we played this year by any means."

Crisler's 'Best Team'

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP).—With their greatest display of cheers, back-slapping, hugging and yelling of the year, the mighty men of Michigan expressed their joy today with their own superb exhibition of football.

After the frenzy died down a bit, the doors were opened to a score of newsmen who poured uncounted questions on the smiling coach, Crisler.

"Yes, I think it's the best team I ever coached, though the teams I had at Princeton in 1933 and 1935 were great teams."

And so it went. And of course, the inevitable comparison with Notre Dame, which whipped the Trojans 38-7, was invited.

With a smile, the Wolverine coach answered, "Yes, I think this was a wonderful game."

Through the gloom of the Trojan dressing room, Coach Jeff Cravath was still able to speak.

"We knew we were outclassed," said Cravath, "but we didn't think we would be outclassed that much. We expected to do a better job."

Was Michigan better than Notre Dame? (Michigan had a 49-point margin over Troy, the Irish 31.)

"Michigan wouldn't beat Notre Dame's first team, but the Michigan reserve strength is far superior," Cravath said.

He pointed out that Johnny Lujack, Irish ace, didn't throw any passes in the second half against USC, and opined the Irish score could have been higher.

Who would Cravath take—Lujack or Bob Chappuis?

"Both," said honest Jeff.

Gridiron Nomad

Shaughnessy Example of Coach's Fate

By Steve Snider

NEW YORK, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—This is the day of the great American headache and a lot of football, a combination that fits Clark Shaughnessy to a T.

With Shag back in the news again as an advisory coach of the Los Angeles Rams, we got to thinking about this gaunt, graying strategist whose passion for football has brought him more headaches than any member of the coaching fraternity.

His career is a grim commentary on the frailty of the position held by those victorious coaches in the Rose, Sugar, Orange, Cotton and bowls of other flavors who grabbed their moments of glory today.

Six years ago this new Year's Day, Shaughnessy was Mr. Football, himself, the genius of the T formation whose rags-to-riches stanford eleven just had completed a perfect season with a victory over Nebraska in the Rose Bowl. He was the toast of collegiate football.

BUT GENIUS must be tempered with something Shag obviously lacks, for he's the Bobo Newsom of football, an inveterate nomad with an uncanny ability for getting himself in a jam.

He left Stanford before his contract was out and took a coaching job at Maryland. He left there after only one year (1942) and went to Pittsburgh where he lasted three years before a storm broke above his head and forced a resignation.

Back he went to Maryland in 1946 where his team lost six of nine games, and once more he was retired as a collegiate coach.

The last four years, coinciding with coaching jobs at Pitt and Maryland, he was an adviser to the Washington Redskins but even that didn't work out to the satisfaction of all concerned. So now he's due to apply his T-strategic brain to the Los Angeles Rams next year on a contract supposedly calling for more than one year of service.

THE FIRST TIME we ran into Shaughnessy he was nursing the University of Chicago through its death rattle in football, an era in which the university president preached 10-cent football admissions and Shag's teams played the game in such a pitiful manner that even a dime, at inflation prices, would have been an overcharge.

He then was working with George Halas and Ralph Jones on a system that later gained renown as the T-formation as we know it today.

He fed his underweight, under-age Chicago squad a steady diet of that intricate system and they couldn't grasp a hundredth of what he was teaching.

The kids rebelled and demanded fundamental football so they could hold the score down against teams like Michigan, Ohio State, Illinois and the others out there. He quit in '39 and so did Chicago.

At Stanford in 1940, Shag found the only group of boys he could handle properly. Most of them had been on the Stanford team that won only one of nine games the previous year and they were ready for anything.

He won't quit until he finds another outfit like that.

San Diego Battered, 53-0

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP).—Hardin-Simmons University's football team trounced San Diego State College, 53 to 0, in the second annual Harbor Bowl game today with Wilton (Hook) Davis and Charles Bailey providing most of the scoring punch.

An 81-yard dash by Davis, 18-year-old freshman halfback, was the longest scoring run. He made another sensational 44-yard dash from scrimmage, in which he crossed up the field twice. He punched out numerous shorter gains.

San Diego made only one serious threat to score—just before the end of the half when three successive first downs carried the ball to the Hardin-Simmons 12.

Approximately 11,000 fans saw the game.

Raisin Bowl

'Wonder Boy Le Baron, 17, Paces 26-14 Pacific Win

Fresno, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP).—The College of the Pacific Tigers, with speed and deception behind a massive line, scored a 26-14 football victory over the University of Wichita Shockers today in the third annual Raisin Bowl.

The speed and passing of the Tigers' "wonder boy," 17-year-old Eddie Le Baron, enabled Pacific to outplay the Kansans before about 13,000 fans.

Pacific dominated the play in a game full of long runs and spectacular pass completions. Each team made three goal line stands within its 10-yard line.

Wichita scored after one minute of play when Don Brown of Pacific fumbled the kickoff. Jim Nutter recovered for Wichita and Co-Capt. Art Hodges made the touchdown from the 12-yard line.

The Tigers roared back to score three minutes later when Le Baron on a beautiful piece of deception passed to John Rohde for 34 yards and a touchdown.

The second Pacific score came in the second quarter on a 52-yard punt return by speedy Bob Heck.

Pacific scored again early in the fourth period when it marched 93 yards in seven plays. Ray Hunter went over left guard for 3 yards for the touchdown.

Wichita battled back into the game, scoring two minutes later and only five plays after the kickoff. Hodges bucked over from the 1-yard line.

The final Pacific touchdown came after Bruce Orvis ran 58 yards to the Fichita 3-yard line. John Poulos carried the ball over two plays late.

The lineups:

Wichita		Pacific
Knopick	L. E.	Rohde
Crelly	L. T.	Campora
Schreiner	L. G.	Brumm
Swager	Center	Hall

Wichita	7	0	0	7	—14
Pacific	6	7	0	13	—26

Wichita scoring, touchdowns—Hodges (2). Points after touchdown—Allen (for Knocke) (2) (placements). Pacific scoring, touchdown: Rohde, Heck (for Orvis), Hunter (for Orvis), Poulos (for Kane). Points after touchdown—Hardin (for Orvis) (2) (placement).

Delta Bowl:

Mississippi Triumphs in 4th Period

By Ronald Autry

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 1 (AP).—The University of Mississippi came from behind with two great touchdown passes today to defeat Texas Christian, 13 to 9, and write a story book finish to the first Delta Bowl game before some 28,800 persons.

Playing his last collegiate game, Mississippi's Charlie Conerly hit two pass receivers for touchdowns within the first four minutes of the last quarter and thereby averted what had apeared to be almost certain defeat.

Berry Runs for Score

The TCU Horned Frogs had held the lead for two quarters after fleet Lindy Berry intercepted a pass early in the second period and ran 30 yards to pay dirt. Wayne Pitcock's kick was good. A few minutes later, a Conerly punt was blocked and it fell into his end zone and out of bounds to give the Texans a 9-point lead.

Conerly completed 12 of 28 pass attempts for 187 yards despite an icy wind and damp ball. The big TCU line bottled the Mississippi running attack to 111 yards. TCU gained 135 yards on the ground, 54 by passing. Both teams had 16 first downs.

Extra Point Fails

The first Ole Miss score was made by big Joe Johnson, who fell across the goal with a 30-yard pass held snugly. Bobby Oswalt's place kick was no good.

The Rebels came alive again when Bobby Wilson intercepted a pass on his own 36. Within a few seconds Conerly fired another pass to Earl Howell and the young back darted over. Oswalt kicked the extra point and that was the ball game.

The game was sponsored by the Memphis chapter of AMVETS. The victory was the ninth of the season for Mississippi and a personal triumph for Coach Johnny Vaught, an alumnus of TCU, who played under the Frogs' Dutch Meyer.

Even after the second Ole Miss touchdown, the Rebels had TCU on its 2-yard line when Otis McKelvey bobbled a kickoff and was hit promptly. But McKelvey and Carl Knox hustled the ball back to the Mississippi 40 and made four straight first downs before an intercepted pass stopped them.

W & M Bows As Arkansas Rallies, 21-19

Leon Campbell and the outstanding Forker back fought his way to the 25.

A 15-yard penalty for unnecessary roughness put the ball on the Arkansas 40.

Three plays later, Gordon Long threw a pass that Ehd Jim Cox carried all the way to the William and Mary 15 before John Bruce knocked him out of bounds.

Campbell, 180-pound Arkansas sophomore who compared favorably with All-Southern Jack Cloud of William and Mary, fought his way off tackle to the 8, then plunged into the end zone for the winning touchdown.

The once-beaten W. & M. squad scored in the first three minutes and appeared on its way to a rout when it had a 13-0 advantage with six minutes of the second quarter gone.

Fowler Is Early Goat

Fowler, whose extra points provided the winning margin, was an early goat. On the first punt of the game by Buddy Lex, Fowler fumbled and Center Tommy Thompson recovered on the Arkansas six.

It took Jack (Flying) Cloud just two tries to bull his way for the first Dixie Bowl score.

Later, after Fowler again fumbled a punt and Thompson again recovered, Lex went 42 yards on a pretty cutback and Cloud went the remaining 18 yards for another apparent score. The Indians were offsides, though, and the run was nullified.

W & M was not to be denied and in the second period marched 73 yards for the second score. The Indians reeled off yardage steadily and Cloud finally broke through for 11 yards from the 13, and made the other two yards in three attempts.

Arkansas got back into it with a couple of sensational scoring plays. Ken Holland passed to Ross Pritchard, who took the ball on the W. and M. 37, and went all the way on a 59-yard advance.

Inside the 10, he completely fooled back Herb Poplinger and went over untouched. William and Mary still wasn't too concerned and was on its way to retaliating when Stan Magdziak threw a flat pass from the Arkansas 34 with only 1.05 to go in the first half.

End Melvin McGaha intercepted the short toss on his own 30. Behind superlative team blocking, he went 70 yards to put the Razorbacks in front, 14-13.

The Indians came back fighting after the intermission and Buddy Lex, top ground-gainer of the day with 118 yards, set up the third touchdown.

Thomas' Recovery Saves It

Lex, who was breaking loose all afternoon, went 28 yards to the Arkansas 11. When the Razorbacks held, he threw a six-yard touchdown pass that Henry (Blinkety) Blanc sprinted for and caught in the end zone.

Even after it lost that lead on the amazing comeback by Arkansas, William and Mary had another scoring chance before the game ended.

Lex broke loose from the Arkansas 29 in the last 30 seconds and went to the 15. When he was stopped, he lateralled to Stan Magdziak who fumbled when hit and Bill Thomas recovered for Arkansas to sew up the game.

It was a bruising battle and the Indians definitely were handicapped by the loss of several of their key players. Carried off were Tackle Harry Caughron, Guard Jim McDowell, Back Tom Korczowski and late in the game, Back Jack Cloud and Center Tommy Thompson.

What Was Your Choice of Bowl Game Listening?

You football fans who spent most of yesterday twisting the dial to make the most of the football broadcasts, might be interested in a little early afternoon conversation that took place in the Walter Haight living room. To wit:

Mrs. H.—What stations are going to carry broadcasts of the bowl games?

Mr. H.—I have the list right here in The Washington Post. Now, WINX has the 'Gator Bowl, WRC has the Rose Bowl, etc. etc.

Mrs. H.—Isn't that awful?

Mr. H.—I'll admit it's a difficult choice. Which one do you want to listen to?

Mrs. H.—None of them. I'm looking for a station without a bowl game.

Penn, Michigan Trying to Slate Rivalry Renewal

Philadelphia, Jan. 1 (AP).—Pennsylvania and Michigan, both long football powers in the East and Mid-West, are scheduled tentatively to renew their gridiron rivalry next fall.

All that prevents completing arrangements, a Pennsylvania representative said today, is the Ivy League's approval for Penn to start practice a week earlier than league rules now permit.

The game is scheduled for Ann Arbor September 25. The last time othe two elevens met was in 1944 when Michigan defeated the Red and Blue, 41-19, at Franklin Field.

Under Ivy League rules, members are not permitted to start practice until the day after Labor Day, which will be September 7 this year. Penn is expected to ask permission to start workouts around September 1.

Houston Beats Lane, 7 to 0

Fort Worth, Jan. 1 (AP).—Samuel Huston College of Austin, Tex., defeated Philander Smith College of Little Rock, Ark., 7-0, in the second annual Cattle Bowl game here today before 80 0fans.

The winning touchdown came in the second quarter when James Hillyer, 195-pound Panther back, whipped around end from the 5-yard line. Fullback Walter Tolliver kicked goal.

Samuel Huston made another threat in the final quarter, reaching the Dragon 1 before losing the ball on downs. Philander Smith never drove beyond the Panther 30.

Vulcan Bowl

Wilberforce Wins, 27 to 21

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 1 (AP).—Putting on a last-minute surge, the Wilberforce Green Wave defeatured the Grambling Tigers, 27 to 21, in the seventh annual Vulcan Bowl today.

Trailing 21-14 at intermission, Grambling came back in the third period to throw the game into a 21-21 deadlock.

In the winning minutes of the fourth quarter, Wilberforce drove 90 yards for a touchdown, Fullback Charlie Mahorney carrying the ball across from the 1-foot line.

Freddie Hall, who made good the first three conversions, missed his fourth attempt.

The Tigers outgained the Wave both on the ground and in the air, 284 yards to 271. Each team tried 12 passes and each completed six.

Wilberforce took the lead in the first period, scoring from 31 yards out after a recovery by Halfback Walter Sellers of a Grambling fumble. Mahorney plunged over from the 2.

A 31-yard run by Luther Ensley started Grambling on a 71-yard march to tie the score in the first period when Fullback Albany Cross plunged across from the Wave's 1-foot marker.

Bethune-Cookman Beats Lane, 6-0

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 1 (AP).—The Bethune-Cookman College Wildcats of Daytona Beach, Fla., won a 6-0 victory over the Lane College Dragons of Jackson, Tenn., in the sixth annual Flower Bowl Negro football game today.

The only score of the contest, watched by approximately 3000 persons, came near the end of the first quarter. On an exchange of punts, the Wildcats took the ball on Lane's 38 and began a drive which ended when Sport Anderson, Bethune-Cookman quarterback, sneaked over from the 4.

Who Had the Ball?

Miami, Fla., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Coach George Sauer of Kansas said after the game today that the fumble which cost his team a tie or victory in the Orange Bowl appeared to him to have been recovered by Jayhawk Quarterback Lynn McNutt instead of a Georgia Tech man.

"Someone must have stolen it away from him before the whistle was blown," Sauer said.

Otto Snellbacher, Kansas end, asserted "McNutt had it, was down and the whistle should have blown."

Sun Bowl

Miami Whips Texas Tech On Blocked Kick, 13-12

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 1 (AP).—Robert Speelman and Ernest Plank combined talents today to lead Miami University of Ohio to a 13-12 victory over Texas Tech in the Sun Bowl.

Speelman, Lansing, Mich., reserve guard, kicked Miami's extra point and plank, 6-foot, 3-inch tackle from Bexeley, Ohio, burst through the Tech line to bloek a placekick that would have tied the score with 9 minutes to play.

A crowd of 16,000 saw the Miami Redskins sack up the third Sun Bowl victory in as many tries for a grid team from the mid-American conference.

For more than a quarter, Miami's tricky T-formation baffled Tech, and throughout the game they had the best of the tussle, running up 414 yards rushing to Tech's 277 and 21 first downs to Tech's 5.

Miami scored in the first and final periods. The first came on a nine-play drive sparked by Quarter Mel Olix' passes. Halfback Ara Parsechian went over. Captain Bill Hoover, Miami end, blocked a punt to set up the other with Halfback Paul Shoults bucking it over.

In the second, Calvin Stevenson ran a punt back 32 yards. Bud Conley contributed an 18-yard dash to the seven and then sneaked through for the score. The last score came on an interception by big Bernie Winkler, Tech tackle and cocaptain. He Scooped in Olix' attempted screen toss, and rambled 24 yards to pay dirt.

Wins in Australia

Adelaide, Australia, Jan. 1 (U.P.). Frank Moylan, hard-hitting placement shot artist from Trenton, N. J., staged a brilliant rally today to defeat Australia's E. H. Brodie, 6—8, 3—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2.

Cigar Bowl

West Chester 26-7 Victim Of Mo. Valley

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 1 (AP).—Missouri Valley College powered its way to a 26-7 victory over West Chester (Pa.) State Teachers College in the second annual Cigar Bowl football game today.

It was the thirty-second consecutive victory for Missouri Valley and its second bowl win since the close of the 1947 regular season. The Vikings defeated Murray College (Texas) in the Boys Ranch Bowl December 13.

Missouri Valley moved to a score in every quarter today before a disappointing 10,000 crowd and dominated play through a large part of the game. West Chester made several threats but was able to get a touchdown only in the fourth period.

Alva Baker circled right end for 18 yards and a touchdown for Missouri Valley with the game only three minutes old. He set up the score with a 47-yard dash on the first play from scrimmage. The second Missouri Valley touchdown came early in the second quarter on Roy Preston's 1-yard plunge.

Recovering a fumble on its own 40 midway in the third period, Missouri Valley went the 60 yards for the score. Lingenfelder got the last 2 yards.

The only West Chester touchdown was scored on a 1-yard plunge by Leroy Jones after a sustained drive from the 7, where the Pennsylvanians took a kick-off.

Missouri Valley's final score came shortly afterward on a 77-yard march. Baker went across from the 2.

Fan Would Give $50,000 to See Irish-Michigan

Chicago, Jan. 1 (AP).—Otto Schnering, Chicago candy manufacturer, said tonight he would donate $50,000 "to charity if Notre Dame and Michigan would meet in a football game here within the next 30 days with the proceeds of the game also going to charity."

Schnering said such a meeting would settle the issue as to which was better and would be "a wonderful thing for Chicago and for charity."

The rules of the Western Conference, of which Michigan is a member, prohibit participation of post-season games except for the Rose Bowl contest. Notre Dame, likewise, has a no post-season game policy.

Bethlehem Blasts Sacramento, 56-0

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan 1 (AP). The Bethlehem Bulldogs rolled down a snow-patched field in Albuquerque's "Youth Bowl" today for eight touchdowns, a safety and six conversions to trounce the Sacramento All-Stars, 56-0.

Salad Bowl

Nevada Wins 13-6 Over N. Texas State

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 1 (U.P.).—Nevada spotted North Texas State six points then cut loose with its passing attack to win the first annual Salad Bowl football game, 13 to 6, before 12,500 fans today.

The game was billed as a grudge contest after Nevada at first turned down the bid on grounds that North Texas wasn't a worthy opponent, and it lived up to its billing. Repeated minor skirmishes were kept in check by cooler headed players on both teams.

North Texas drew frist blood in the initial period when Fullback Bill Cromer drove over from the 4 after a 46-yard pass play from Quarterback Fred McCain to End Joe Abbey. Billy Dinkle missed the try for point.

Nevada pulled ahead by one point in the next period on a pass-and-run play good for more than 100 yards. Quarterback Stan Heath faded into his own end zone and pitched a perfect strike to little Tommy Kalminir, who caught it on the 45 and ran to a score. Bob Corley kicked the extra point.

The Nevadans added one more touchdown in the fourth period for good measure.

Autocrat Wins $50,000 Santa Anita Race

Rippey Runs 2d Behind 7-Year-Old

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 1 (AP).—A 7-year-old long shot, Autocrat, owned by Bert Baroni and Tony Battilana of Arcadia, won the $50,000 added San Carlos Handicap, feature race at Santa Anita today.

The aging Autocrat got away slowly and came up gradually on the outside, then responded to pressure in the stretch, passing the heavily favored With Pleasure and overtaking Rippey and Fair Truckle to draw away. Jockey Tony Skoronski was aboard the winner.

Rippey of the William Helis Stable ran second and Prevaricator, an entry of E. O. Stice and Sons, took the show spot.

Baroni, veteran California horseman, thus captured one of the best races since his Top Row won the Santa Anita Handicap in 1936. 1:22 2/5. Autocrat paid the long-shot players $50.20, $18.80 and $9.60 at the mutuels. Rippey returned $11.70 and $7 and Prevaricator paid $5.60.

May Fly Winner At Fair Grounds

New Orleans, Jan. 1 (AP).—May Fly, from the W. H. Bishop stables, won the $3500 New Year Handicap at the Fair Grounds here this morning with a two-length victory over King Dorsett and the rest of the field.

Up on May Fly was Jockey Gerald Porch, who yesterday made a clean sweep of the two feature events at the track.

May Fly paid $11.20 for $2.

A record crowd of 12,000 was on hand for the morning program, held early because of the Sugar Bowl football game this afternoon.

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks: At Gulfstream.

Recently, I wrote a piece about Florida-bred horses. Now let's take a peep at California-breds. Time was when they were jokes around the circuits. However, they have come to be respected of late. Of the 116 candidates for the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap next February 28, no less than 28 were foaled in California. Included on the list are Cover Up, On Trust, Artillery, See-Tee-See and El Lobo. Such sires as Beau Pere, Heelfly, Hollyrod, Sierra Nevada, Top Row and Count Gallahad are represented in the big race. Only one California-bred horse has won the Santa Anita—Miss Ethel Hill's War Knight—in the 10 runnings. Last year, the State had Pere Time (third) and See-Tee-See (fourth) in the battle behind Olhaverry and Stitch Again. From the West comes word that Artillery will be the one to beat. The front-runner recently took the $50,000 Bay Meadows Handicap by five lengths and the chart says he was a galloping winner. Cover Up has been rested and will be brought along gradually, his handlers say. But there's one thing certain, West Coast cars will be cupped toward Florida today where Calumet's Armed makes his 1948 debut.

Hockey Lions Oppose Springfield Tonight

The Washington Lions return to Uline Arena tonight against the Springfield Indians in an American Hockey League contest at 8:30 o'clock.

In Springfield, the Lions will be facing the only team with which they have had constant success this season. In five previous meetings the Lions have won.

However, Washington must win tonight to escape dropping into the league cellar behind the Indians.

Leading the invaders is former Washington skater Paul Courteau, who is tied with Teammate Eldie Kobussen with 38 points each. Bill Summerhill, also among the league leaders with 35 tallies, is the third Springfield pacemaker.

Goalie Floyd Peras of the Indians is always a hard man to pass and in his last outing shut out the Philadelphia Rockets, 5-0.

With the return of Frank and Dan Porteous, who missed last week's game with Springfield due to transportation troubles, the Lions will be at full attacking strength.

Ken Schultz, whose recent surge has put him up among the league's top point makers with 36, will again be the pivot around whom the Lions' attack is based.

When Schultz is right the team is capable of giving anyone a hard time, but unfortunately Ken has suffered injuries which often has kept him out of play.

With Schultz back in tip-top shape, Washington will be out to gain ground on New Haven, currently in third position in the Eastern division.

Hogan Heads Open Today

Los Angeles, Jan. 1 (U.P.).—A trio of veteran golfers—Bobby Locke, Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret—held the favored roles today as 135 linksmen completed their final practice rounds for the twenty-second annual $10,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

Action over the 18-hole Riviera Country Club layout begins tomorrow and continues through Monday. Hogan, a two-time winner, took the title last year with a 280.

Hogan is one of three golfers who have captured the crown more than once. Harry Cooper took top honors the first year, 1926, and repeated in 1937. MacDonald Smith won four times—1928, 1929, 1932 and 1934.

Big question mark is Lloyd Mangrum, National Open titleholder in 1946. Returning from a long rest period following the Ryder Cup matches in November, Mangrum in practice has flashed a deadly long game and a bullseye putter.

National Open king Lew Worsham, Jim Ferrier, National P. G. A. champion, Australian Norman von Nida, and Western Open titleholder Johnny Palmer also have received strong pre-tourney support.

Heading the amateur field are Bud Ward, Spokane star, and Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio.

Okla. Aggies Take Title

Oklahoma City, Jan. 1 (AP).—With only 8 seconds left to play, Oklahoma A. & M.'s Bob Harris sank a field goal to give the Aggies a 32-31 victory over the Texas Longhorns and their fourth consecutive championship in the All-College tournament here Wednesday night.

Harris' shot, which meant Texas' first basketball defeat this season, helped land himself and the Aggies' nerveless A. L. Bennett on the tournament all-star team.

Others selected by officials and sportswriters to the dream-team were Slater Martin, Texas; Herb Bergman, Georgia Tech; and Jackie (Preacher) Robinson of Baylor.

Bennett was also unanimous choice as most valuable player, the second unanimous selection for the honor in the history of the 12-year-old event. The other such choice was another Aggie, Bob Kurland, in 1944 and 1945.

Lee Gamble Manages Florence Steelers

Florence, S. C., Jan. 1 (AP).—Lee Gamble has been named manager of the Florence Steelers, new member of the Tri-County Class "B" baseball league, it was announced today. Gamble was with the Cincinnati Reds in 1938-39-40, and played in World Series games the latter two years.

What Am I Saying! By Frank Morgan

Seneca once said: "The ladder you climb to success is a shaky one." It is also full of splinters.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

PAY RAISES: The Administration's pay raise plans are beginning to jell—plans which are apt to be most disappointing to Federal workers when they are made public.

This is the story up to this point:

In his messages to Congress next week, the President definitely won't indorse any of the 30-odd bills which propose a flat increase to each Federal employe from $500 to $1000.

The messages will emphasize anti-inflation measures. It's argued that he would be inconsistent—although Federal workers have a splendid case—to indorse any of the pay bills or to specifically propose an equally costly substitute.

If the President makes any mention of the subject, he can be expected to do one of the following:

1. Merely suggest to Congress that it study the problem and to offer it the help of the executive agencies in working out an equipable plan;

2. Recommend that salaries be raised only for top officials who have had no increase since before the war, and to propose the lifting of the ceiling on Classification Act salaries from $10,000 to $15,000, or,

3. Propose a general revision of the Classification Act—the law that fixes the salaries of per annum workers—to give the Civil Service Commission greater flexibility in adjusting salaries to meet changing conditions.

The President, of course, could recommend—and perhaps will—a combination of the above possibilities. However, it's entirely possible that the President will ignore the subject in his state of the Union, budget and economic messages and to take up the subject in a special statement to Congress some time later.

The President is firmly on record for higher salaries for Federal officials. There is no reason to believe he has changed his attitude on this what with a steady flow of resignations from officials who can no longer afford to stay in Government. But beyond that—what will he do? Perhaps this is the answer:

Work on it is being kept strictly secret, but top Federal personnel officials are drafting a major and drastic revision of the Classification Act—a revision which would give the Civil Service Commission the authority to adjust salaries of per annum employes. For example, it's suggested that Congress give Civil Service authority to consider the difficulty of recruiting new employes—competition from private industry—as a factor in fixing per annum salaries.

If the commission had this authority now, it would doubtless raise the scale of typists and stenographers to fill the estimated 1500 vacancies in this city. Also, salaries of other hard-to-fill jobs.

This plan, it's pointed out, could conceivably lead to geographical differentials in the pay of per annum workers. For instance, the present scales paid stenographers and typists in Mississippi may be ample and perhaps higher than the prevailing rates paid to private employes in that State. But in this and other large cities qualified people are turning up their noses at Federal job offers in these and other fields. Civil Service could relieve this problem if it had the discretionary authority to adjust salaries to meet changing conditions.

Officials have been working on this proposed major change for the past several weeks. However, nothing definite—except the general principle—has been agreed on. It's doubtful if the proposal will be in final form soon enough to be included in any one of the President's message to Congress next week.

The Army wage board has made preliminary studies on the wage change plan for the officials who are drafting it.

Any such plan to give the Civil Service Commission the authority to fix wages wouldn't be new in Government. After all, the salaries of upward of 500,000 hourly and daily employes are now adjusted at regular intervals to meet new conditions. The agencies have full authority to fix such salaries without the prior approval of Congress.

However, any change in the Classification Act rates—the pay of per annum employes—must have congressional approval and that okay is difficult to obtain.

The two pay systems have resulted in unjust discrimination against the white-collar and the postal employe. The average pay of the per diem worker has been raised considerably more since 1941 than that of the per annum employe.

Another relatively minor change in the Classification Act will be proposed to Congress by Civil Service. It proposes a merger of the five classes of employes under the Classification Act into a single group.

The five classes are (1) professional and scientific, (2) clerical, fiscal and administrative, (3) craft, protective and custodial, (4) subprofessional and (5) clerical-mechanical.

A single schedule of rates would simplify the act and make it more understandable by everyone. No employe would lose by the merger. The plan has the unanimous approval of the Federal Personnel Council. New York State recently merged its many groups of employes under a single salary schedule.

Morning After

64 Show Up Unsteadily In Court

It was just one more bleary day for the faceless "men of extinction."

They shivered and they shook, and they wore a permanent New Year look. They walked as if treading on egg shells while stumbling toward the bench in the "booze and smoke" courtroom of Municipal Judge Aubrey B. Fennell.

There were 64 to be judged. All were arrested Nw Year's Eve for drunkenness or disorderly conduct, usually both. Eleven others arrested during the night were released when friends appeared at the precinct station to pay $10 bail. Those in court had no friends or $10 which they could forfeit as the price of freedom.

There was Joe Moran of no particular address. He had come out of District Jail a few hours before New Year's. Of the 365 days in 1947, Joe spent 240 days in jail for drunkenness. He began celebrating immediately.

30 Days and $100

"I'm guilty. I'm ashamed of myself," said Joe. Judge Fennell sent him up for 30 days and fined him $100. Failing to pay the $100 he would have to serve 90 days more, a total of 120 days—just long enough to carry him through a cold winter and into mid-spring.

Seaman Plutarco Arcante of the U. S. Navy obviously didn't belong in the company of faceless men. At the age of 19, his Latin blood warmed to the festival of New Year's. Just when the old year was being serenaded into drab history, Plutarco stationed himself at 14th and F sts. nw., and kissed the gals goodbye, said Police Pvt. R. F. Moody.

There was nothing romantic about Policeman Moody. "I saw him kiss a couple of girls against their will," he told the court, "and I warned him. But I saw him do it again—and it was against their will. So I ran him in."

Judge Fennel, in a mellow mood, warned "don't do it again" and turned Plutarco loose on personal bond.

Present From Judge

Ray Rush was "just celebrating New Year's" at midnight in the 1400 block G sts., nw., and was carried away by the celebration. Judge Fennell scowled at his previous record, thought a moment, and announced his verdict:

"You've had a good record for a couple of months. I'm giving yu a New Year's present as a reward. You're free on personal bond. Don't come back here."

Police said it was a nice, polite New Year's celebration.

There weren't as many drunks as we get on some Saturday nights," said one policeman at the First Precinct.

Thieves Active As Celebrants Welcome 1948

Burglars, Snatchers, Pickpockets Also Fail To Make Resolutions

Thieves evidently did not make any resolutions for the new year judging from police reports.

Virgil Tiner of 1620 15th st nw., one of three persons who reported he was robbed, complained that a man forced him to hand over his wallet with $24 and a cigarette lighter while he was walking at 15th and R sts. nw.

Herman L. Goodloe of 322 C st. se said he lost $90 to a pickpocket during a streetcar ride between H st and New Jersey ave. nw. and 15th and H st. ne.

Joetta S. Gibson, 25, Howard University student, told police a man snatched her pocketbook containing about $38 while she was walking on 4th st. near College st. nw.

Cigarettes and candy value at $214 were stolen by burglars from a grocery store at 243 K st. ne., Peter Carlino, proprietor, reported.

Someone slipped a $200 diamond ring off his finger sometime during the wee hours of the morning, Roy D. Stropes of 1277 New Hampshire ave. nw. told police.

A $100 muskrat coat was stolen from her apartment at 1417 9th st. nw., Jannie Simmons said.

Miss Margaret Ramsey of 2943 McKinley st. nw., reported her pocketbook containing $25 in cash vanished during a party at the Corinthian Yacht Club, 2d and V sts. sw.

Automobiles owned by the following persons were reported stolen: Jay A. Williams, 90 R st. nw.; James E. Mesero, 5058 Lowell st. nw., and Deruter Butler, 1624 O st. nw.

24 Hours to Appeal

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 1 (AP).—Officials said today that unless former Premier U Saw appeals within the next 24 hours, he will be hanged without further legalities for abetting the slaying last July of U Aung San, head of the Burmese government, and six cabinet ministers. He was sentenced to death upon conviction last Tuesday.

Virginia Takes Area Honors In First Baby Sweepstakes

Virginia babies took first and second honors yesterday in the "Who Was Born First in 1948?" contest in Greater Washington.

A 6-pound 8-ounce girl, born to Mrs. Patricia Vetter of 3120 North Pershing dr., Arlington, at one second past midnight at the Alexandria Hospital, was the winner.

In second place, at 12:01 a. m., was a girl born to Mrs. Susie Richey, 1311 Washington ave., Huntington, Alexandria, at the Bethesda Naval Center.

Washington's first baby, also a girl, was born at 12:30 a. m. at Freedmen's Hospital to Mrs. Audrey Hawkins, 718 21st st. ne.

Consolation Prize

Parents whose babies were born on the 1947 side of midnight, while winning no recognition, have the consolation of being able to claim their offspring on their income tax.

Treasury officials said that a child bor nanytime in 1947, even on the last day, gives his parents a $500 income-tax exemption for the full year.

For a family with a net income of about $3000, the exemption saves about $95 in taxes, officials said.

It was the second year in a row that the Alexandria Hospital had the first baby. A year ago Martha Ann Petitt was born 15 seconds after midnight to Mrs. Ethel Petitt of 708 North Patrick st., Alexandria.

Arlington's first this year was a 7-pound 12-ounce girl born to Mrs. Emma Johnson of Clifton, Va., at 2:32 a. m.

In Prince Georges County, the first of 1948's babies was a boy born at 4:30 a. m. at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, to Mrs. Dorothy Crosby of Berwyn, Md.

Late but Lucky

Although not the first born in Montgomery County—the Richey baby was a clear winner for that title—the baby that appears the most likely to hit the jackpot because of early arrival is a boy born at 9:20 at Washington Sanitarium to Mrs. Myrtle Scharffenberg of 804 Houston ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Unless another contender appears, Lloyd Robert Scharffenberg will win more than a dozen prizes offered by Montgomery County merchants as the first baby of 1948 born to a resident of the county in the county.

Lloyd's prizes will include a layette, a membership in the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, two quarts of milk a day for a month, a pair of boxing gloves, baby furniture and year's worth of doctor's prescriptions.

His father, Richard Scharffenberg, biology student at the Washington Missionary College, and his mother also will cash in on awards of clothing and household goods.

The bay's physician, Dr. Emma Hughes, will receive 50 gallons of gas or enough to visit the Schaffenberg home for a year.

The second place winner in the Montgomery contest was Donald Edward Leonard, 6-pound, 11-ounce son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Leonard of Gaithersburg. He was born at 9:56 a. m. at Montgomery County General Hospital.

Other Early Arrivals

Other hospitals in Greater Washington reported the following babies as their firsts for 1948:

Providence, at 12:55 a. m., an 8-pound, 3-ounce boy to Mrs. Mary Sheahan, 4300 13th st. ne.

Columbia, at 1:17 a. m., a 7-pound, 2-ounce boy to Mrs. Margaret Cunningham, Spencerville, Md.

Garfield, at 2:37 a. m., a girl, weighing 7 pounds, 1 ounce to Mrs. Geraldine Polinger of 6600 Luzon ave. nw.

Sibley, at 2:53 a. m., a 6 pound girl to Mrs. Lorraine Babcock of 3427 Eastern ave. ne.

Doctors, at 4:12 a. m., a girl, weighing 7 pounds, 4 ounces, to Mrs. Robert Gallup, 3414 Martha Custis dr., Alexandria, Va.

Walter Reed, at 6:43 a. m., a girl to Mrs. Henry Sweeney, 536 East Nelson st., Alexandria, Va.

Prince Georges Hospital, at 9:13 a. m., a boy to Mrs. Elizabeth Pieplaw of 21 Manor circle, Takoma Park, Md.

Georgetown, 10:32 a. m., a boy to Mrs. Dorothy Speaks, 1513 C st. se.

WINX-FM Goes To Full Power Of 20,000 Watts

WINX-FM, which has been operating at 2000 watts, went to its full power of 20,000 watts New Year's Eve.

Beating the January 1 deadline the station had set for itself, WINX-FM began broadcasting on its new power at 6 p. m. Wednesday and stayed on the air until 1::30 a. m., according to Ralph Cannon, chief engineer for WINX and WINX-FM.

Final adjustments in the transmitter and the replacement of a burned-out arc kept the station off the air until 2:30 p. m. yesterday when it resumed broadcasting.

WINX-FM is the first frequency modulation station in this area to operate regularly at the maximum strength of 20,000 watts permitted for Class B stations.

WWDC-FM has been experimenting at that power for some time, and is expected to be the second FM station in Washington to use full power.

D. C. May Win Safety Prize Again, Traffic Head Hopes

Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the traffic division, said yesterday he has "high hopes" that Washington will win the 1947 National Safety Council grand award for fewest automobile deaths among cities of comparable size.

Washington won the 1946 award with 59 motor vehicle deaths out of a total of 72 traffic deaths (streetcar deaths aren't counted in making the award). Although total traffic deaths for 1947 equal the 1946 figure, the number of deaths excluding trolleys, rose to 65, Miller said.

GSI Strike Held Likely On Monday

Employes to Meet Sunday as Situation Appears Deadlocked

Today may be the last day, for a while, that some 80,000 Government workers can get full service at 42 cafterias in Federal buildings.

More than 1500 employes, members of Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, UPW-CIO, are expected to go on strike Monday. The exact day of the walkout appeared to be the subject of a union meeting scheduled for 2 p. m. Sunday at Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 9th st. nw.

Although the union and Government Services, Inc., operators of the eating places, are hopelessly at odds, labor leaders refused to rule out the possibility the strike might be postponed beyond Monday. However, they also hinted at the chance that the workers could be suddenly called out sometime today.

GSI is firmly resolved to hold no negotiations with a union that has failed to comply with the Taft-Hartley Act. The union, seeking a 15-cent hourly wage boost, contends this is irrelevant to contract negotiations and points to other corporations that have negotiated contracts despite the union's failure to comply. The contract between GSI and the union expired at the end of 1947.

Wednesday night, the same union concluded an agreement for a new contract with National Food Corp., operators of 18 cafeterias and snack bars at the Pentagon. Terms of the contract will be made public at an employes' meeting today.

Meanwhile, top GSI officials gathered last night for what appeared to be a prestrike strategy meeting. Subject of the conference was not disclosed, but one official promised "some news" today.

A union official said he anticipated GSI might make a wage offer "to entice workers away from the union."

Chinese General Warns of Result If Reds Win Out

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—Western democracies were warned against the spread of Communism in Asia by Gen. Ho Ying-Chin, wartime chief of staff of the Chinese army, in an address before the Moral Rearmament Assembly today.

"The civil war in China today is not a mere dispute between parties," Ho declared. "It is a conflict between two ideologies. The democracies cannot afford to see China overrun by materialists because China is immensely rich in natural resources and manpower. It also enjoys the strategic key position of blocking the expansion of the materialists in southeastern Asia."

Speaking of the current conflict in China, Ho, who is head of the Chinese Military Staff delegation to the United Nations, said "it is not one of those Gilbert and Sullivan opera wars, but a full dress war. If China fails in its struggle, we can reasonably be assured that all of Asia will fall. As Asia goes so goes Europe and the rest of the world."

Few 'Bugs' Found

New Crime Report Plan Is Success

Members of the Police Department yesterday reported comparatively few "bugs" resulting from the new crime reporting system initiated at 12:01 a. m. yesterday when the new communications and records bureau began operation.

"We had no more trouble than we expected in getting the system started," said Capt. John Agnew, chief of the new bureau. He said he expects the new system will produce more accurate reporting of crime and closer checks on case handling.

Captain Agnew said final rewiring of telephone equipment is expected to be complete by 8 a. m. January 7, when full operation of the new bureau is scheduled to begin at police headquarters. Until then, the police radio dispatcher will remain at the Tenth Precinct Station, he said.

The new bureau was set up after an extended campaign by The Washington Post, which discovered that police were following a city-wide practice of "pocketing" complaints, giving a distorted picture of Washington's serious crime situation.

Moderately Cold, Gusty Winds Due In District Today

Better hold those skirts, ladies, and those hats, gentlemen.

For today the wind will blow. And, said the weatherman last night, it probably will be the gusty kind.

The clearing skies, the forecaster expected, will be accompanied by gusts up to 30 and 35 miles an hour and moderately cold temperatures.

Weebee The day's high is expected to be about 42, rising from a 36-degree early morning low.

The Weather Bureau reported 1.33 inches of rain fell here during yesterday's 12-hour-steady rain that began at 8 a. m. and continued until near 8 p. m. There was some intermittent rain during the night.

D. C. Holds Down Traffic Deaths to 72 Second Year

Recorded Crimes Show Big Jump Owing to Listing Of All Offenses

By John London
Post Reporter

For the second successive year Washington has held its traffic deaths to 72—a record figure.

The 72 deaths in 1946—equaled in 1947—is the lowest number ever recorded snce the Police Traffic Bureau began keeping statistics in 1923, and won for Washington the National Safety Council grand award for the fewest number of automobile deaths among cities of comparable size.

The 72 deaths in 1946, and then again in 1947, were far below the all-time high of 135 traffic deaths in 1934. Best previous record was 76 deaths in 1926.

Even though deaths in 1947 equaled those of 1946, there was reason to believe the past year's record was even better than the one registered in 1946.

This was the conclusion drawn by Wallace L. Braun, acting traffic director, who pointed out that while accidents increased about 12 per cent during the year, registrations of motor vehicles increased 20 per cent.

More Cars On Road

He said that because more cars are on the road now, and more traveling is being done, the increase in traffic accidents is "not commensurate' with registrations. Braun pointed to a 30 per cent increase in gas consumption in 1947 as compared with 1946, and a jump in motor vehicle registrations from 129,161 during the first 11 months of 1946 to 155,937 during the same period of last year to support his belief that the 1947 traffic record was an improvement over that of 1946.

An unofficial survey revealed these traffic statistics up to December 29 of last year, as compared with the full 1946 year: 72 deaths for each year; 11,487 accidents in 1947 as compared with 10,437 in 1946; 4743 injuries in 1947 as compared with 4668 in 1946.

Of fatalities reported for 1947, 49 had pedestrians as their victims, as compared with 57 in 1946. Up until December 1, 1947, there had been 6792 accidents involving property damage to automobiles as compared with 5987 for the same period of 1946.

Ignoring Crosswalk Ranks High

The survey revealed that largest single cause of pedestrian fatalities was walking out of the crosswalk. This accounted for 2 deaths during the year. Next largest factor was when the pedestrian walked behind a moving vehicle from behind a parked car, or from between parked cars. This accounted for seven fatalities. Three deaths occurred while pedestrians were drinking, the survey showed.

Six hit-and-run accidents resulted in fatalities. Police have apprehended all six of the drivers. Five of the cases have been closed and the sixth is pending.

Of total accidents which occurred during the year, about 7 per cent involved collision between automobiles. In nonfatal accidents in which automobiles were concerned, the principal causes were failing to yield right-of-way to another car; failing to give full time and attention to driving, following too closely behind another car, and driving on the wrong side of the street.

Speeding accounted for about 150 accidents during the year, and driving while drunk resulted in seven fatalities, the survey showed.

Congestion to Continue in 1948

Ernest R. Brett, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, in commenting on the survey, warned the public not to expect any substantial alleviation of traffic congestion during 1948.

He pointed out that a number of projects have been undertaken to this end, but that none is expected to bear fruit during this year. Among projects cited by Brett were the two bridges which will replace the Highway Bridge, the Dupont Circle underpass, the K st. express highway.

Brett said it will be a "great day" for Washington when a central traffic-control board is established, permitting regulation of all traffic lights. He said the biggest obstacle to establishment of such a system is the intersecting avenues and circles, which make synchronization of lights difficult.

George R. Hammond, director of Safety and Education for the D. C. division of the American Automobile Association, pointed to the fact that only four children were killed in traffic accidents this year as a part of the continuing benefits of the schoolboy patrol system. He said none of the child fatalities occurred at intersections controlled by the patrols.

Hammond listed several projects which the AAA will undertake this year to smooth the District's traffic problem. He said the AAA plans to study possibilities for providing an increasing number of private parking spaces; will ask simplification of parking signs and regulations; and will survey automobile dealers to ascertain whether they are in collusion in refusing to sell new cars except on old-car trade-ins.

Hammond said the AAA also plans to urge the D. C. Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board to urge local automobile dealers to cooperate in correcting abuses in the new and used-car markets.

Celebrant Sleeps on Wrong Bed

A bed is a bed to Robert Osborne, 27, even when it's next door.

Osborne testified before Judge Armond Scott in Municipal Court yesterday that he usually lost his memory when drinking. He couldn't remember anything, he said, of what happened when he was trying to find his own home after a New Year's celebration.

He lives in a red brick house at 1202 G st. se., which is identical in appearance with the one occupied by Charles Nicely at 1204 G st. se.

Miss Lillian Roberts testified she was asleep on a studio couch at about 7 a. m. in the Nicely home when she was awakened by an "animal-like growling" at the front door. Whoever it was was trying to force the latch, and he succeeded.

Miss Roberts said she ran for a shovel. While she was trying to find it, she said, Osborne climbed onto the couch and fell fast asleep. Her brother-in-law, Charles Nicely, tried to eject him, but Osborne—who is over 6 feet tall and weighs over 200 pounds—swung and missed.

Police Pvt. Randall C. Degges testified that when he arrived, Osborne was sleeping peacefully. Judge Scott suspended sentence and released Osborne when he promised to stay sober next New Year's Eve.

Sleeping Woman Burned

An Alexandria woman was sent to Alexandria Hospital with severe burns yesterday after falling asleep in a chair with a cigarette that ignited her clothing.

She was Mrs. Virginia Hughes, 412 E. Monroe ave., Alexandria. She was reported suffering first, second and third-degree burns to face and chest.

Her husband told police he believed the cigarette dropped either onto her robe or the overstuffed chair in which she was sitting.

Y Has Contests

Twelve athletic programs and exhibition contests featured a New Year's Day Open House yesterday at the central branch, YMCA. They included everything from bowling contests and diving exhibitions to boxing, wrestling and a jiu jitsu demonstration.

Anderson to 'Meet Press'

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson will be guest on Mutual's "Meet the Press" broadcast at 10 o'clock tonight over WOL.

Anderson will be questioned by Ed Folliard of The Washington Post, Bert Andrews of The New York Herald Tribune, Ernest Lindley, chief of the Washington bureau of Newsweek Magazine, and Lawrence Spivak, editor and publisher of American Mercury.

5 Escape From Boys' Home

Five boys escaped from the Industrial Home for Colored Children at Blue Plains, D. C., about 1:30 p. m. yesterday, school authorities reported.

The boys are believed to have fled into nearby woods as others were taking their place in the midday lineup. Two of the fugitives are 16, two 15 and one 14 years of age. All lived in Northwest Washington.

Chase Is Informal

Dressed in bathrobe and pants, Police Sergt. Lee Hensley of the Traffic Division chased and caught his man early yesterday.

Sergeant Hensley, 1140 17th st. ne., was awakened in the early hours when an automobile sideswiped a car parked in front of his house. Hensley took chase in a commandeered taxi and arrested William G. Ethington, 19, 4213 Longfellow st., Hyattsville, Md.

Municipal Judge Aubrey B. Fennell set bond of $700 on the charges of driving on the wrong side of the street, driving over a sidewalk, and leaving after colliding. The case will be heard January 12.

Children's Hospital Directors Name Acting President

LEMON

James H. Lemon, investment banker, has been elected first vice president and named acting president of the board of directors of Children's Hospital, it was announced.

A general partner in Johnston, Lemon & Co., investments, he has been on the hospital board for eight years, and has long been active in civic affairs. He will continue to serve as acting president in the absence of Wilson B. Nairn, president, who is recovering from illness.

Lemon was chairman, residential area, of the 1945 and 1946 Red Cross campaigns here. He is on the board of directors of Washington Properties and the District Theaters; is chairman of District 11, National Association of Security Dealers, for Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and North Carolina, and is treasurer of the Princeton Club of Washington and member of the Metropolitan and University Clubs.

Citizens' Group Dance

Pinecrest Citizens Association will hold its first monthly dance of the new year at 9:30 p. m. Saturday at Pinecrest Recreation Center, St. Lawrence dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Agencies Lose 4 With Service Of 146 Years

Four Government employes with combined service totaling 146 years retired at the end of 1947.

The four are:

J. Walter Thompson, copperplate engraver with the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Department of Commerce for 46 years.

Wilson T. Fletcher, foreman of the mimeograph department of the Federal Reserve Board, after 34 years.

Miss Lilian T. Bowman, chief of the Finance Division of the U. S. Tariff Commission, after 30 years.

Miss Ruth M. Ridgway, secretary to Tariff Commissioner Oscar B. Ryder, after 36 years.

Thompson, 73, after touring the country in vaudeville with a trained dog act, joined the Geodetic Survey in 1901 as an apprentice engraver, and remained in that department until his retirement. This brings to an end 230 years of service by his family in the Department of Commerce. This total includes 45 years by his father and 48 years by his uncle before their retirement. Thompson lives at 1306 Delafield pl. nw., and plans to take it easy from now on.

Miss Ridgway entered government service in 1911 in the States Relation Service of the Agriculture Department. After six years there, she moved to the Tariff Commission and was immediately appointed secretary to one of the commissioners. Since 1934 she has been secretary to Ryder. Miss Ridgway, 60, who lives at 6401 Florida ave., Chevy Chase, was presented with a set of mahogany tables by Commission employes. She, too, plans to relax starting today.

Wilson T. Fletcher, 65, is the oldest employe in time of service in the Federal Reserve System. He was a messenger for the organization committee in 1913, and became a messenger for the system when the board was sworn in in 1914. Actually, he has 34 years' service, but is only credited officially with 33, since service records started in 1914 when the system started. Fletcher, who lives at 1112 G st. ne., was made foreman of the mimeographing department in 1945. Employes of the department presented him with a traveling bag yesterday.

Youngest in time of service of the four; but still with 30 years to her credit is Miss Bowman. Starting in Federal work in 1917 in the War Risk Insurance, she moved to the Coast Guard and then, in 1923, became a clerk in the Tariff Commission. In 1941, after 18 years, she became chief of the finance section, one of the few women ever to hold such a position. Miss Bowman, 67, a native of Richmond, living at Colonial Gardens, Arlington, was presented with a pocketbook with Government bonds in it by her friends on the commission.

Old Resident Club to Reject Area Members

Members of the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia indicated yesterday they will reject a proposal to open the organization to all Greater Washington residents.

The question of extending the group's geographical limits came up as some 50 members held their annual New Year's Day meeting at the Old Union Engine House, 19th and H sts. nw.

A special committee appointed by President John Clagett Proctor reported against the proposal. Chairman George Sullivan said such an amendment to the association's constitution would violate the charter, which specifically limited the Oldest Inhabitants by including the words "of the District of Columbia" in the title. Also, he pointed out, it might result in forfeiture of certain bequests to the organization.

Other members concurred in opposing the proposal, but the matter was put off until the March meeting. Yesterday's meeting and the February meeting, held on Washington's birthday, are both traditionally social or patriotic meetings, it was explained.

"The proposal hasn't a ghost of a chance," commented Jesse C. Suter, one of the 13 vice presidents.

Sullivan also reported the committee's opposition to raising the dues from $2 to $3 a year.

Proctor, as chronicler of the association, read the "Chronicles of 1947," an annual feature detailing the previous year's occurrences. At noon, Frank Gummell, chairman of the house committee, sounded New Year greetings to the city by ringing the engine house bell.

Apostolic Delegate Receives 3 Veterans

Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, yesterday received three representatives of Catholic War veterans: William A. Hickey, 1801 B st. se., the organization's national aide-de-camp; David J. Bowman, the CWV District of Columbia Department commander; and Captain Howard D. Wilfret of the CWV National Honor Guard.

Hickey said the three were among a group of nine who presented Cicognani with a silk American flag eight years ago.

Margie's Park Has Everything Glen Echo Has, Proves to Girl Owner Dad Is Best in World

HER FATHER'S HOBBY—Marjorie McConnell, 11, of 1308 Allison st. ne., plays with the miniature amusement park her dad, William C. McConnell, first started to build in 1937.

Eleven-year-old Marjorie Ann McConnell is pretty sure she's got just about the best dad in the world.

For as long as she can remember she's always felt that way—especially around Christmas time.

In 1937, William C. McConnell, 46, 1308 Allison st. ne., thought it would be fun to build a miniature amusement park, adding a few pieces each Christmas, that his daughter could grow up with. That is exactly what has happened.

In the basement of the McConnell home is a 10-foot-square replica of all the amusement parks you ever saw. Touch a switch and the merry-go-round whirls into action, with lights twinkling, horses bobbing up and down and sure-nuff calliope music.

And that's just the start of it. Smack in the center of "Margie's Park" is an airplane swing, for all the world like the one at Glen Echo, that revolves gayly when another switch is pushed.

In one corner, lights ablaze, spins the Ferris wheel. In another is the picnic grove, complete with tiny tables and a nearby hot-dog stand. At the entrance to the park are benches, where a few tired figures rest while others saunter past.

Around the outside of the park runs an electric train. "Margie" is chief engineer—when she can get her daddy away from it.

McConnell doesn't know how much time he's spent assembling the replica of spangleland. He guesses "from 2000 to 3000 hours." He wouldn't take $1000 for it, he says—and then adds: "I don't think I'd take anything for it."

An instrument maker for the Weather Bureau, McConnell erects the Lilliputian amusement park around December 1, and packs it away in February. This year he added background scenery, a blimp and a Toonerville trolley. Seven switches connected to tiny electric motors put it into operation.

McConnell is proudest of the merry-go-round. He'll talk about it for hours—it's the original piece. Mrs. McConnell, in charge of sewing on the project, made its sateen canopy.

"I always did have a hankering to make that merry-go-round," McConnell says. "I got that, and then I wanted the rest."

"Little boy . . ." interjects his wife.

155 Nurses Pass District Examination

The Nurses' Examining Board of the District of Columbia has announced that 155 of the 206 nurses taking Board examinations in October passed, 28 of them with honors.

Highest averages were achieved by Mrs. Gladys Davis Henson, who trained at Garfield Memorial Hospital nursing school, and Mrs. Sheila Stern Abenshon of Sibley Memorial Hospital nursing school. Both obtained average grades of 97, while Miss Robinette Patterson of Providence Hospital made a 96 average.

Other nursing school graduates who passed the examination with honors were:

Gallinger Hospital: Mary Ellen Flynn, Margaret Dulu McCoy, Alice Lorraine Peaslee.

Garfield Memorial Hospital: Florence Margaret Cavanagh, Janet Crandall, Mary Booth Lowrey.

Georgetown University Hospital: Marietta Abell, Sylvia Katherine Czepiel, Dorothy Ellen Draine, Doris Anita Little, Marion Taylor Peters.

Providence Hospital: Sister M. Felicita Day, Mary Elizabeth Henry, Josephine Marie Kennedy, Sister Clare Lindner, Beatrice Marie Martin, Lenore McCuistion, Maryalice Phillips, Sister M. Gemma Semon.

Sibley Memorial Hospital: Bonnie Blossom Skaggs.

St. Elizabeths Hospital: Helen Elizabeth Gilleland, Betty Alice Glueck, Alice Joyce Horn.

University of Colorado, Boulder, Colo.: Mrs. Katheryn Jenkins Becker.

Graduates of the nursing school at St. Elizabeths had a perfect record, all seven candidates having passed the exam. Other graduates passed as follows: Providence, 43 out of 44; Garfield, 28 out of 31; Sibley, 15 out of 18; Georgetown, 30 out of 40; Emergency, 14 out of 24; Gallinger, 7 out of 13; Freedmen's, 8 out of 21, and out-of-town hospitals, 3 out of 8.

Naylor Lease Disputants Reach Accord

All sides in the Naylor Gardens sales fight have now agreed on the language of leases that will protect tenants against eviction until the end of rent controls in the District, Defense Homes Corporation officials said last night.

The 748-unit apartments are to be sold for $5,125,000 to the Veterans Cooperative Housing Association.

In a press release confirming the lease agreement, B. T. Fitzpatrick, a director of Defense Homes, outlined the settlement terms this way:

"DHC will extend to all bona fide tenants in Naylor Gardens individual leases for a term continuing until the date of termination of rent control in the District, including any period for which rent control for the District may be extended by the Congress beyond the present expiration date of March 31, 1948.

"Tenants may terminate leases upon 30 days notice to the lessor.

"Under the lease, no tenant may be evicted, except for usual causes, nor may any tenant's rent be increased except with the approval of the authorities administering rent control in the District. The lease does not bar tenants from asserting any rights or claims they may have under the lease protections with respect to a temporary lapse or hiatus of District rent control.

"The leases will provide that non-members of the cooperative will enjoy privileges and services in the project at least equal to those available to members."

New Ministers

3 Changes Announced By Churches

One pastoral resignation and two pulpit changes were announced last night in Washington church circles.

Dr. Armand T. Eyler resigned as rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church, Connecticut ave. and Bancroft pl. nw., effective immediately. Ill health was the reason given for his decision. Dr. Eyler has been rector since 1940 and is former president of the Washington Ministerial Union. No successor has been announced by the vestry.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Andrus B. Smith was chosen pastor of River Terrace Episcopal Church, Clay and Anacostia sts. ne., and will take up his duties Sunday at 11 a. m. He comes from St. Michael's Episcopal Church, Oakfield, N. Y.

Officials of River Road United Presbyterian Church, River rd. and 45th and Fessenden sts. nw., announced that the Rev. Harry W. Rankin, assistant pastor of Mount Lebanon Church, Pittsburgh, has accepted an invitation to become pastor. He and Mrs. Rankin will arrive in February. He will succeed the Rev. Virgil Cosby, now serving a Cleveland parish.

The Rev. William H. Kepler, former minister of the Catonsville (Md.) Presbyterian Church, today at 8 p. m. will be installed as pastor of Northminster Presbyterian Church, Alaska ave. and Kalmia rd. nw. He succeeds Dr. Walter E. Price, who retired from the active ministry.

James A. Frye Funeral Rites Set Monday

Funeral services for James Aloysius Frye, 52, Manassas, Va., street foreman who died Thursday at Georgetown Hospital, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Monday at All Saints Catholic Church, Manassas, with burial in Manasses Cemetery.

Mr. Frye was brought to the hospital here Tuesday for an operation for head injuries suffered in a fall from a truck Sunday.

Mr. Frye was a native of Montgomery, W. Va., and had lived in Ringgold, Va. for many years before coming to Manassas about 16 years ago.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Florence Frye, and 10 children: Miss Margaret Frye of Washington; Mrs. Cecil R. Funk, Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Mary Dobson, Miss Dolores Ann Frye, Miss Anna Marie Frye, Stuart J., Francis W., Paul A., Leonard M. and Arthur T. Frye, all of Manassas. A grandchild also survives.

16 on Plane Shaken Up

Atlanta, Jan. 1 (AP).—Thirteen passengers and three crew members were shaken up today but none was injured seriously when the landing gear of an Eastern Air Lines plane collapsed in blustery weather.

Sailors aboard the grounded brigantine General Arnold outside Plymouth Bay in 1778 survived by pouring rum into their water-filled boots. The rum had a lower freezing point than the water that was soaking them.

Dr. W. A. Jack Funeral Set Tomorrow

Funeral services for Dr. William A. Jack of 3000 Connecticut ave. nw., who died Wednesday on his seventy-fourth birthday, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 18th and Church sts. nw., with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Dr. Jack, a native of Newport, R. I., had been a resident of the District for the past 66 years, and was a member of the Freedmen's Hospital and Sibley Memorial Hospital staffs. He retired about six years ago.

He was graduated from Howard University College of Medicine in 1896. Dr. Jack was a member of the District of Columbia Medical Society and a charter member of the Washington Medical and Surgical Society of which he was president in 1912.

Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Edith Prevost Jack; two sons, William A. Jack 3d of Hampton, N. J., and Wales H. Jack of Washington, and three sisters: Mrs. Walter Byrne, Elmira, N. Y., and Miss May D. Jack and Mrs. Luther E. Schreiner, both of Washington.

Frank Hughes Veteran D. C. Printer, Dies

Frank A. Hughes, 75, one of a group of printers who founded the Washington Times in 1894, died at 1:30 p. m. yesterday at Sibley Hospital.

The paper he helped start was eventualy merged with the Washington Herald into the present Times-Herald.

Mr. Hughes, 1012 K st. nw., retired three years ago after 50 years as a printer on the Times-Herald. He had been ill since November.

He and 49 other unemployed printers here pooled $1700 each to start the Washington Times, the first issue of which came out on St. Patrick's Day, 1894. The printers after a short time sold their paper to C. C. Conn. It was later acquired by Frank Munsey and afterward by William Randolph Hearst. Mr. Hughes continued working in its composing room. He set in type both the first and last columns written by the late Arthur Brisbane.

Mr. Hughes is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Kathryn Hughes, and a daughter, Mrs. Paul A. Graves, who is a District school teacher. A son, Wallace Hughes, died a few years ago.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw., with bufial following in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

He was born at Moejen, Denmark, and was 22 when he arrived in the United States in 1898.

A few years later he was employed by the Michigan Dairy and Food Commission, being stationed at Alma, Lansing and Adrian. In 1912, he was employed by the Federal Department of Agriculture, working for the Government until 1926 when he came here to found the Titusville Dairy Products Co.

Joseph D. Fry, Ex-Delegate, Dies in W. Va.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 1 (Spl.) Funeral services for Joseph Daniel Fry, 48, former member of the West Virginia House of Delegates, who died suddenly at his home Tuesday, will be held tomorrow in Hedgesville.

Mr. Fry

The services will be held at the home of his sister, Mrs. James W. Poisal.

A veteran railroad man and fraternalist, Fry was named in 1937 by the then Governor Homer A. Holt to the House of Delegates to fill the unexpired term of John L. Wever who died while in office.

He was defeated for a full term at the 1938 election by the Rev. Charles R. Beard.

A native of Middleway, Jefferson County, W. Va., Fry was the son of the late Dr. David Paul Fry and Mrs. Sarah Gilbert Fry. He began railroad work at an early age in Hedgesville and at the time of his death was assistant yardmaster at Cumbo, near here.

He was long a member of the Democratic county executive group and for a period served as vice chairman. He also managed one campaign in the county for former Representative Jennings, of this District.

When he died he was a member of the Berkeley County Rent Control Advisory Board.

A member of the Masons, Elks, American Legion and Sons of Confederate Veterans, he also was active in the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Beside his wife, Mrs. Gertrude R. Fry, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. Kenner W. Eutsler, of Shepherdstown, and Mrs. Poisal.

Your Questions On Homemaking

What is the best way to remove grease spots (butter stains) from wooden floors? I have tried scouring powder with no results.
E. C.

Mix a solvent such as gasoline or benzine with either plaster of paris, fuller's earth, or dry Portland cement to make a soft paste. (In mixing and using this paste, guard against fire in every way and work in a well-ventilated room.) Spread the paste on the stain half inch thick or more and cover with a sheet of metal, glass, or something similar to check evaporation. The solvent, working down into the wood, will dissolve the oil, which will be drawn up into the powder. The poultice should be left in place for several hours, or until it has dried.

A little while ago, I painted (in oils) a "pin-up girl" on one of my husband's plain neckties. He wore it for about a week and so many of his friends asked me to make them ties just like it that I have been busy for about a month just filling their orders. I would like to sell some of them to the stores now that I am sure people like them. Do you know who I should show them to? What store would it be best for me to contact first? I have never seen anything like them in most men's departments. I'm hesitant about going to the big department stores in town because they always seem just to handle "big name" clothing. Besides, I would not be able to supply them in large amounts. A. D. R.

Why not talk to the manager of some gift shop in your section of the city about selling the ties for you? I know of one such shop that takes orders for hand-painted ties. Several ties are kept on display there to show the customers what they are like. Orders are then taken for a woman in the neighborhood who paints the ties. Perhaps you could work out some arrangement or, if you prefer, make a direct sale to the shop. If the store is located near you, it will be more convenient in handling the orders. Choose a gift shop that handles handkerchiefs and similar small articles of dress as well as china and glass.

I have an old piano that has developed a rough, cracked appearance on the surface at one end. There seem to be tiny cracks criss-crossing each other. What causes this and what can I do about it? H. C.

The condition to which you refer is called "hairline checking" and often develops on varnishes exposed to sunlight, a hot radiator, or other kinds of heat followed by sudden coldness or by repeated changes in temperature. It may also be caused by too much or too little moisture in the wood before the finish was put on or because of the way the veneer was cut and which side was used for the outside surface.

To improve the appearance of checked varnish, first wash the finish with a furniture wash made of 1 quart hot water, 3 tablespoons boiled linseed oil, and 1 tablespoon turpentine. When it is thoroughly dry, rub the surface with the following heavy mixture furniture polish:

For a small area, mix together 2 tablespoons of boiled linseed oil and 1 tablespoon of turpentine. Add 1½ tablespoons of clear varnish. Double these amounts for a large surface. Warm mixture before using it by placing in uncorked bottle or other container in a pan of hot water. Apply the warm liquid to only a small part of the furniture at a time. Rub it hard, using the palm of your bare hand. As the polish sets, it begins to stiffen and your hand drags. Then rub off at once the polish that remains, using several clean cloths. If you do not take off all this extra polish, the furniture will remain sticky. Repeat the treatment until the checking shows less.

Why do my cornmeal muffins always stick to the pan?
J. T. D.

To prevent cornmeal muffins from sticking, always grease the pans well with an unsalted fat. It is also helpful, if your pans are new, to season them by coating them well with an unsalted fat and place in an oven at low temperature (250 degrees F.) for several hours. As they heat in the oven, replenish the fat from time to time so there will always be a good amount in the pans. Also, wash the pans in soap and water only when necessary. Just rinse after use the rest of the time. Avoid scouring, for this removes the fat from the pan. Also, cornmeal muffins will not come from the pans easily if there is too high a proportion of cornmeal to flour in the recipe. One cup of flour to one cup of cornmeal gives a muffin which will not crumble and so can be easily removed. Another way to prevent sticking is to place paper cup cake liners in your pans and pour the batter into them.

Many thanks to G. S. F. and P. F., both of whom sent in the same recipe for mead after seeing a request in this column for instructions for making a drink of this type. The recipe, which is from Mrs. Beeton's English Cookbook, is as follows:

MEAD

Ingredients:
5 pounds of honey
3 gallons of water
Whites of 2 eggs
1 blade of mace
½-inch of cinnamon
3 cloves
½-inch whole ginger
1 tablespoon brewer's yeast

Method: Beat whites of eggs slightly. Put into large pan with the water, honey, mace, cinnamon, cloves, and ginger. Whisk or stir frequently until boiling point is reached, then simmer gently for about 1 hour. Let the preparation cool. Strain it into a cask, stir in the yeast, and cover the bung hole with a folded cloth until fermentation ceases. Then bung tightly and let the cask stand in a cool, dry place for nine months. At the end of this time, rack the mead carefully into bottles and cork them tightly. The mead may be used at once, but it will keep for years if stored in a cool, dry place.

The following recipe for Mead Wine from the same cookbook was also sent in by P. F.:

Ingredients:
5 gallons of water
5 pounds of honey
2 ounces dried hops
1 tablespoon yeast

Method: Dissolve the honey in the water. Add the hops and simmer very gently for about 1 hour. Turn into an earthenware bowl. Let mixture become milk warm, then stir in the yeast. Allow it to remain covered for three days, then strain the liquid into a cask. Bung loosely until fermentation subsides. Afterwards, tighten the bung. The wine should remain in the cask for 12 months, then be racked off carefully into bottles.

How can I dye nylon hose to the new smoky shades?
A. I. L.

There are a number of stocking dyes in the new shades on the market now. Instructions for use come with the dyes. Some suggest putting the unfolded stockings in a saucepan of dye and heating to just below a simmer for 15 minutes. This gives a more permanent dye job than simply rinsing the stockings with a dye bath. Frequent moving of the stockings in the dye is necessary to keep them from acquiring a streaked effect.

If stocking dyes in the new smoky shades are unobtainable in your local stores, you can use regular black, dark brown, or dark grey dye. If you do not wish to heat the stockings in a dye bath, you can simply put dye solution in a jar, drop in wet, freshly washed stockings, and shake well. Leave the stockings in the dye, shaking jar occasionally, for 20 minutes or until the shade you wish is achieved. Be sure to have the dye solution good and dark as nylon doesn't absorb dye well. The dye placed in nylon hose by this method will have to be renewed from time to time as it will wash away.

PRETTY prints to wear under your fur coat now and with your spring hat later in the season are fashion news right now. Here the blonde and talented young actress, Jean Ruth, models a two-piece silk ensemble that is gay and colorful, just the thing to shoo away the after-holiday blues. Royal blue, rose and green is splashed against a white background and it is worn with a white felt hat trimmed with a saucy blue feather. Ensemble is from Erlebacher's. Miss Ruth plays the part of Katrin in the play "I Remember Mama" at the National Theater

Gay Accessories Give a Lift to Winter Wardrobes

By Peggy Preston

JUST ABOUT this time of year women like to have a "pick-up" for their wardrobes. Three cold and dreary months stretch ahead before spring arrives and by midseason our winter clothes are apt to get a tired, jaded look.

There are lots of tricks you can use to shake the blues out of your clothes closet. You can invest in a pretty, new blouse for your suit; add a perky collar and cuff set to your basic, dark dress. Usually belts can work wonders and, of course, in this season that stresses scarfs, you can always toss a square of bright silk over your shoulder or under your chin.

Perhaps you own a good-looking suit jacket, with a skirt you wouldn't be caught dead in—too short, and you only bought it last fall. Then buy yourself a new skirt. It needn't match your jacket, for two-toned suits are considered good this year. When investing in an extra skirt of this type, remember that a short, fitted jacket looks best with flared skirts, whereas your long, fitted, or flared jacket couples better with less full or straight skirts.

Maybe it's last year's cloth coat that is giving you the willies by hanging a couple of inches above your new long dress. Take your courage and a pair of strong shears in hand and crop it off. You'll then have a topper—the latest thing in coats.

BUT IF IT is a new dress you must have, then try and buy one that will see you safely through the spring, and even the summer. The shops are filled with pretty, silk prints at this season. You can wear them under your fur coats now and in the warm, spring days they will go well under a spring coat. When real hot weather rolls around they will still be useful. Since the hemline is now more or less stabilized you no longer have to worry about buying a dress that will be too short six months from now.

Another excellent choice in January or February is a navy blue dress. Navy is habitually a best seller for spring and this year is no exception. You can get them in either silk, rayon or sheer wool. The latter is a favorite with women who have tried it and found it a perfect year-'round fabric.

Blue polka-dot silk with a dash of red is a traditional color scheme for early spring and can give you and your wardrobe a big lift in this irksome between-season period.

Married Five Months, With Really Nice Well Furnished Apartment, Bride Wants To Entertain Her Friends; Man Objects

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have been happily married for about five months. We are greatly interested in a common hobby and quite content to lead a quiet home life, keeping pretty much to ourselves. But I think we rather overdo this.

My husband, I'll call him Jim, inclines to be anti-social to a certain extent, and while I like a quiet life, I would enjoy entertaining our friends now and again, especially as we have a really nice well furnished apartment.

Our friends before marriage were for the most part people with whom we worked, meaning that Jim had his friends and I had mine. By now I have met all his friends but he hasn't met all of mine, and he is opposed to our entertaining them.

Guests a Strain, From Man's View

HE SAYS it would be a strain on him to entertain friends of mine whom he doesn't know, but I have been invited to their homes so often that I want to reciprocate.

I am always willing to entertain his friends and we have done so a couple of times; but when I suggest inviting mine it always leads to a slight argument and ends with my dropping the subject, as I don't want to force the issue against his wishes. Above all, I don't want to cause dissension between ourselves.

Jim is well educated, more so than most of my friends, and his views are more sound, I think, although he is the quiet type, not given to ready conversation. But to return to my problem: Am I justified in my desire to entertain these friends with whom he is not yet acquainted? P. A.

Man's Introvert Logic Is Morbid

DEAR P. A.: There is something wrong in a conjugal relationship when a wife must cudgel her brains to try to justify a wish to entertain old friends who've been warmly hospitable to her. She shouldn't have to plead in defense of an impulse so cheery and wholesome.

So what's wrong here? Your husband's introvert logic, obviously. Or call it his narrowing self concern, which impels him to withdraw progressively from the open field of human relations, and to try at the same time to impose upon those whose lives touch his a way of behavior which has only his comfort—on his terms—in view.

Possibly you and he have some factors of temperament in common. Perhaps there was the attraction of co-equal intelligence in addition to sex appeal and one or two shared cultural interests, to spark mutual desire for life companionship.

Wife's Wishes Should Prevail

BUT in any event, it seems you are predominantly extrovert, or socially out-going, as versus his marked introvert bias. And in all probability it was your very difference from him in this respect that made him most eager to sign you on as "the light of his life."

Doubtless he felt, unconsciously at least, that your great forte as his wife would be relieving him of loneliness and/or need to exert himself against his grain to keep channels of friendship open. And so it would—if he'd stand out of your light and second your lead; or even sit back shyly and let you swing it.

In my opinion, the issue should be resolved in your favor. Jim's isolationist tendencies if humored would breed a stagnant atmosphere and eventually you'd be two of a kind; both growing morbid together. You need the fresh air of friendship flowing through the home, and it will be good for him too—so go ahead with plucky initiative and entertain on a modest scale. M. H.

Where's My Loyalty Check? One Citizen Asks President; Loelia Has Lawyers Dueling

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NATURALLY President Truman receives an incredible amount of mail. It's mostly serious reading matter but occasionally a humorous plum leavens the mass of complaints, requests and gratuitous advice. Recently, the new loyalty check-ups for Government employes made headlines, directed a torrent of letters to the White House. Among the lot was a postcard printed with the following simple direct request:

"I read where the Government is giving out loyalty checks. I was employed by the Government during the war. I was loyal. Please send me my check."

Who Divorced Whom?

NO WONDER there are so many lawyers. And so many of them have lots of fun. The latest entertaining case to agitate New York and London's more stylish circles is Loelia, Duchess of Westminster's suit against the Luce organization. It all came about when the Time-Life London representative scribbled a giddy story about a treasure hunt chez newspaper tycoon Lord Rothemere and his wife, Annie.

It was a charity affair, and as partners in the hunt, all ladies were auctioned off. The Duchess, who's handsome, charming (and, incidentally, a magazine gal herself, as she heads House and Garden in Britain) was bid in at the lowest price.

But it wasn't the low bid which irked, but rather the Luce minion's labelling her one of the Duke's divorced wives. Actually, the former Loelia Ponsonby, third of the Duke's four wives, divorced the Duke.

On this slight but possibly profitable slip, the Duchess started legal machinery grinding. Her lawyer is John Foster, once a shining social light at Washington's British Embassy. On the Luce side is Bill Whitney. Evidently both are enjoying the situation. For just as soon as John dreams up an angle, Bill blocks it. Then Whitney figures out a dodge and John steps on it. Both are acquiring terrific skill at riposte but it's doubtful if the Duchess will garner any Luce shekels.

Murray Paintings to Be Shown

THE FRIENDS of the late Lieut. Comdr. Edward M. Murray have gotten together a wide variety of his paintings and will exhibit them at French & Co. in New York on January 12. Ned, who hailed from Boston, grew up in Europe, was one of John Singer Sargent's proteges, had a painting accepted by London's Royal Academy when he was 20, died of a heart attack when he was on terminal leave from the Navy almost two years ago. While he lived in Paris he painted portraits of a great many notables—among the most decorative being the Maharanee of Cooh-Behar. He returned to New York when the war broke out, was first commissioned in the Air Corps to execute historical paintings.

Later he was commissioned to paint President Roosevelt's portrait and the painting had scarcely commenced when the Army cut its appropriation for art. So the President immediately transferred Ned to the Navy. The portrait, showing the President at his gadget-covered desk and most informally at work, now hangs in Blair House. Afterward he painted Sir John Dill, and did the portrait of Cordell Hull which is used in almost all official releases about the former Secretary of State.

When transferred to the Pacific, he executed a fine painting of Admiral Nimitz, which is being loaned to the exhibition by the Officers' Club in Honolulu. Included in the show are a number of Ned's "conversation" paintings—interiors of fine rooms with the owner sur place, portraits of personalities ranging from Mrs. Vinton Freedley to Mrs. Harry Gray. The exhibition will last two weeks and his friends are giving a small party at the first day private opening.

Club Holds New Year's Reception

By Genevieve Reynolds

An incessant downpour of rain yesterday failed to dampen the indomitable spirit of Capital's feminine clubdom. Figuratively snapping their fingers at gloomy old man weather, hundreds of club members donned rubber boots along with their gayest finery and trekked from party to party.

By far the most elaborate on docket was the Washington Club's annual New Year's Day reception in the historic clubhouse at 1701 K st. There one could find old Washington and get a brief glance of the leisurely, gracious mode of living that prevailed here a half century or more ago. Several men came in their Prince Albert coats, a dozen or more others appeared in striped pants and cutaways. Jewels gleamed from the black velvet chokers of some 25 women's throats. Then there were varied colored plumed hats, exquisite lace dresses and shawls.

In Receiving Line

Officers of the club who formed the receiving line wore long frocks. These included Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president; Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, Mrs. R. Winston Holt, Mrs. G. Louis Weller, Miss Emma Strider, Mrs. LeRoy Eakin, Mrs. Charles Mercer Marsh, Mrs. Paul Stanley Bond, Mrs. Absalohm Waller, Mrs. William Wintemute Sloan, Mrs. Arthur H. McConville and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor.

Presiding over the punch bowl in the high ceilinged drawing room, lighted with sparkling crystal chandeliers, was Mrs. John S. Pratt.

Taking turns at the tea and coffee urns on opposite ends of the 30-foot long table in the spacious dining room were several past presidents of the club, including Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Mrs. C. Willard Hayes, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Mrs. Frank Forest Bunker, Miss Blanche Street, chairman of hospitality.

Dr. Reid There

Others assisting were Miss Georgia B. Pillsbury, Miss Mabel L. Pillsbury, a life member of the club; Miss Maude Lee Davidge, Mrs. William M. Safford, Mrs. E. W. Green and Miss Grace C. Burton, a former board member for some 15 years.

Chatting over a dish of eggnog ice cream and cookies were Capt. Thomas J. Kelley, USN, and Mrs. Kelley, Mrs. S. L. Weldon, and Dr. Helen Dwight Reid, who was being congratulated on her new job as chief of European education relations, United States Office of Education.

Mrs. Moncure Burke, who is well known in the Capital, was telling friends that she will be living in Washington now after a year's residence in Baltimore.

Glimpsed among the approximately 200 members and their guests were Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hallett, Mr. and Mrs. William Clark Taylor, Miss Temple Bailey, the well known author; Mrs. Franz Ridgeway, Mrs. Robert H. C. Kelton, Mrs. Enos Newman, Mrs. Virginia Armistead Nelson, Dr. and Mrs. William Earl Clark, Mrs. Christian Heritage, Miss Mabel Hiatt, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Jones, Fulton Lewis, Mrs. O. W. McNeese, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Eldridge.

The club's festive decorations of white and silver bells, and green banked mantels was in charge of the art committee, headed by Mrs. Bates Warren and Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax.

Mrs. Perrin Fetes Miss Jane Frederick

MRS. HUGH PERRIN entertained informally yesterday afternoon in honor of her cousin, Miss Jane Frederick, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert T. Frederick of Montgomery, formerly of Washington.

Guests included Miss Betsy Beach, Miss Dore Martin, Miss Kathleen Rowe, Miss Barbara Talbot, Miss Nancy Hoffman, Miss Marilyn Sandwick, Miss Ridgely Chapline, Miss Shirley Schuyler, Miss Kee Dunn, Miss Patricia Mulligan, Miss Eugenia Chase. And Jim Parrin, David and Don Winslow, Gilbert and Cabot Coville, Charles and Bob Norris, Tom Wood, Jerry Kinney, John Elmore, Henry Scruggs, Bob Griffin and Peter Sturtevant.

Reception Cancelled

The annual reception in honor of King Ibn Saud's accession to the throne has been canceled by the Saudi Arabian Legation. For years the party has been a social event for Washington, January 8. The cancellation was ordered by King Ibn Saud.

New Members Honor Guests At Festive Pen Women's Party

Mrs. Truman soon will become an honorary member of the District branch, National League of American Pen Women. So it was revealed at the league's gala New Year's reception yesterday honoring the group's roster of new members. The festive event, held at 1851 Columbia rd., brought out some 200 members and their guests in spite of rain ridden skies and wet streets.

Mrs. Harold D. Carter of Alexandria, and a former faculty member of the University of Oklahoma, played a group of piano selections. Mrs. Blanche Boyce Meyers, music chairman, arranged the program.

New members taking turns at the tea table were Miss Stella C. Brown, Mrs. Henry M. Cleveland, Miss Virginia R. Collier, Mrs. Robert DuBois, Mrs. Paul Hixon, Mrs. Eloise Lavrischeff, Mrs. O. L. Layton, Mrs. Daniel J. Murphy, Mrs. Wallace Muir, Mrs. Oliver Thompson, Miss Katherine M. Hopson and Miss Mary Hester Turner. Mrs. Thompson is a transfer from the Battle Creek, Mich., branch.

Several of the league members brought along their husbands. Oliver Thompson came with Mrs. Thompson as did Walter Meyers with Mrs. Meyers.

Dr. Ruby Nevins, president, Columbian Women of George Washington University, dashed in and chatted briefly with Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell before going on to the Washington Club's reception.

Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, past national president of the league who also headed the local branch, was in a huddle with Dr. Esther Anderson of Lincoln, Nebr.

Mrs. Nelle Van D. Smith was receiving congratulations on the quick sellout of her latest tome, "Radiant Living," while Mrs. Trudie Lyon, current branch president, bemoaned the fact that she is a temporary widow. Her husband, Merle, she explained, is on a business trip to Manila.

Friends Sail Soon On Southern Cruise

Mrs. Ross McIntire, wife of the former White House physician, Vice Admiral McIntire, U. S. N., retired, will leave for a Caribbean cruise on January 10. Accompanied by Mrs. Richard K. Thompson, Mrs. McIntire will visit friends on Curacao and will stop in Colombia and Venezuela.

The two will sail from New York on the Santa Rosa and will return to Washington the end of the month.

Birthday Party

On his eleventh birthday anniversary, December 29, Thom Giambattista, son of Capt. and Mrs. F. D. Giambattista, entertained for 11 young friends. The party was given at the home of his parents, in Forestville, Md.

Holly sent from British Columbia by his uncle, Robert Beddome, decorated the house, and there was dancing and supper from "6 o'clock on."

Visit in Texas

Dr. and Mrs. Jack Kotz are in San Antonio, Tex., for a fortnight's visit with Mrs. Kotz' family.

Fete Marks Haiti's Independence Day

By Elizabeth Maguire

IN CELEBRATION of the 144th anniversary of the independence of Haiti, the Haitian Ambassador, Joseph D. Charles, entertained at a New Year's Day reception yesterday. Distinguished diplomats and officials and their wives were received at the Embassy on 16th st. between 6 and 8 p. m.

In the receiving line were Ambassador Charles, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Edme Mauigat, a current guest at Blair House; Mme. Zephirin, wife of the First Secretary; Mme. Roland, wife of the Military Attache, and Mme. Woel, wife of the Haitian Consul General in New York.

The drawing rooms were filled with pink, white and deep red flowers. In the dining room was a lavish buffet consisting of turkey, salmon and other seafood, salads, ices and cakes. Over the mantels in the hallway and dining room hung lovely oils, painted by students of the Haitian Centre d'Art, a school started by an American named Dewitt Peters.

Orrs Attend

There were also two life-size portraits of historic Haitian figures—Gen. Toussaint L'Ouverture, who died a prisoner of Napoleon, and King Christophe, builder of Citadel La Ferriere.

Sir John and Lady Orr, among the early arrivals, said they were leaving January 16 for Cairo and the Middle East for food conferences there. The Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani dropped by, gave some news of their daughters, Dora and Letizia. The two girls are studying at the University of Florence, rounding out their French and American education, and will not return until they have finished the school year.

Pretty Senora de Beit was there, wearing sparkling diamond earrings, a present from her husband, the Cuban Ambassador, who accompanied her. Fourteen diamonds count their married years and five diamonds count their children.

The Minister of Australia Alfred Stirling, chatted with Admiral William D. Leahy, and the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard L. Thorp were seen talking with Mrs. Robert A. Lovett, wife of the Acting Secretary of State, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward.

New Furniture

Guests admired heavy pieces of handsome mahogany furniture distributed around the rooms. These were flown up from Port-au-Prince especially for the party.

The popular Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen were there and the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles G. Ross. Also, the Minister of South Africa and pretty Mrs. Andrews, the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Vambery, the latter taking time out from house hunting to attend her first Washington party.

Still others included the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Dendramis, the Ambassador to Czechoslovakia, Juraj Slavik; Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, president of the National Council of Negro Women; the Minister of Ethiopia and Mme. Imru and the Ambassador of Siam and Princess Wan Waithayakon.

Miss Trexler's Betrothal Told

At an "at home" party yesterday Mr. and Mrs. George W. Trexler announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lou Ann Trexler, to William M. Wall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Wall of Short Hills, N. J. The wedding is planned for July.

Miss Trexler is a senior at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., where she is a member of Beta Phi Gamma. She graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School in 1946. The bridegroom-elect was a member of the Air Force for over two years, before going to the University of Missouri.

In Washington's Wedding Procession

MISS BEULAH HILL and Roger Todd Davis were married yesterday at 3 o'clock, in a ceremony held at the home of the bridegroom's aunt, Miss Genevieve Hendricks of Georgetown. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hill of Stitzer, Wis., and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Marjorie Hendricks of Normandy Farm, Potomac, Md.

In the absence of the bride's father, Dr. Charles Cole of George Washington University, cousin of the bridegroom, gave the bride in marriage. Tom Browne Pearson served as best man.

Before the ceremony, a wedding luncheon was held at Water Gate Inn.

Mr. Davis attended Friends' School in Washington and Randolph-Macon Academy at Front Royal, Va., before entering the University of Wisconsin in 1942. He served for two years in the Army Air Force in the Southwest Pacific. Mrs. Davis is a student at the University of Wisconsin, where her husband is now an instructor.

After a honeymoon, the couple will go to their home in Madison, Wis.

MRS. MERRITT DeLaMATER
... December bride

DeLaMater—Zeigler

Miss Betty Ann Zeigler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Maurice Zeigler of Bamberg, S. C., was married December 27 to Merritt DeLaMater, son of Stephen Truesdale DeLaMater of Washington, and the late Mrs. DeLaMater. The ceremony took place in Bamberg, at Trinity Methodist Church, the Rev. A. McKay Brabham, cousin of the bride, officiating, assisted by the Rev. S. M. Atkinson.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white duchesse satin, with side-draped panels and sweeping train. A veil of illusion was fastened by a coronet of seed pearls, and the string of pearls she wore belonged to the bridegroom's late mother. The bride carried a white prayer book topped with a shower of tuberoses.

Miss Vive Land, maid of honor, wore a gown of turquoise faille and carried better-time roses. The bridesmaids, Miss Ann Porcher Zeigler, cousin of the bride; Miss Mary Brown Mahon, Mrs. Louis McCormick, Miss Mildred Zeigler and Mrs. Julius B. Ness, wore gowns of American Beauty faille and carried bouquets of white carnations. The junior bridesmaids, Miss Jo Ann Brabham, Miss Ann Flintom, Miss Sally Spann Zeigler, cousins of the bride, and Miss Lois Lapham, cousin of the bridegroom, wore blush pink faille and carried pink carnations.

Mr. DeLaMater attended his son as best man. The ushers were Cadet Swaine Merchant, jr.; Jack Rommell of Washington, David DuPre, jr., of Chevy Chase; Carl Degan, jr., and John Martin Anderson.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which the couple left on a wedding trip to the Homestead in Hot Springs, Va. They will make their home in Washington.

The bride attended Agnes Scott College in Decatur, Ga., and the Washington School for Secretaries. The bridegroom was graduated from Carlisle Military School and attended Drew University in Madison, N. J. He spent two years in the Navy, serving in the Orient. He is now a student at George Washington University, where he is a member of Sigma Nu.

MRS. RAYMOND FISCHER
... Southern honeymoon

Fischer—Smith

In a quiet ceremony on December 27, Mrs. Donna Manor Smith and Raymond William Fischer were married in the north lounge of the Carlton Hotel. Mrs. Fischer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Jesse Manor of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Fischer is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fischer of Austin, Tex.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Lyons velvet sky-blue gown, hand quilted and ankle length. On a quilted muff she carried chartreuse orchids, and on her head she wore a blue feather helmet.

Mrs. Frank Clayton Hepler, matron of honor, was costumed like the bride, in chartreuse. She carried blue flowers and wore a chartreuse bonnet. Little Donna Louise Hepler, flower girl, wore chartreuse velvet with chartreuse bonnet, and also carried blue flowers.

C. L. Smith of New York City was best man, and the ushers were Frank Clayton Hepler of Washington and Frederick Klee of Detroit, Mich.

A reception at the Carlton followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip south by motor, Mr. and Mrs. Fischer will reside in this city at Dorchester House.

Ballard—McCormick

The wedding of Miss Mina McCormick and Edward B. Ballard took place December 20 at 4 o'clock at Trinity Methodist Church of Tallahassee, Fla. Mrs. Ballard is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCormick and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Ballard of Lexington, Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a taffeta gown of white moire, with fitted bodice and full skirt. Her veil was of bridal illusion, and she carried a crescent bouquet of white gladioli and camellias.

Miss Avaree McCormick, her sister's only attendant, wore a baby blue moire taffeta gown, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink carnations. Merel S. Sager of Washington was best man, and the ushers were Herbert McCormick and Wallace McCormick, brothers of the bride.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Scoggin.

The bridegroom received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Harvard University. During the war he spent 39 months in the Pacific

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, theater.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballard will be at home at 42 State Circle, Apt. 2, Annapolis, Md.

Sleeping Bag Will Keep Baby Snug, Warm

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is a time, usually between the ninth and fifteenth months, sometimes later, when babies waken in the night and stay awake for an hour or two. During this time they may not fuss, but play on top of the covers. There would be nothing wrong with this program if the parents could go to sleep. But, since it is cold and since children crawl out from under the covers, it becomes a real problem how to keep them comfortable until they drop off to sleep.

There are innumerable answers to this question and it depends on the child which one is most successful in any particular home. If the child is a quiet sleeper, the sleeping bag or the blanket or comfort, which is tucked under and fastened firmly may be all right. Many children are so very restless and toss about from one end of the bed to the other, or lie crosswise and part of the time on their back and part of the time on their stomach, that it becomes necessary to devise a covering which will keep them warm without hampering their activity.

I like the envelope type of sleeping bag, made of two oblongs of warm material—old blankets, heavy cotton-flannel, etc.—with a cut-out for the neck and a straight opening down the front, and the bottom left open for easy changing of the diapered child. This covering goes right along with the child no matter in which direction he turns, and yet he is always covered from neck to feet. He should wear inside this, or under any sleeping bag, his regular footed-nightgown, and if he does there is little need for any extra covers if the room goes no lower than 60 degrees at night.

Other mothers have solved this problem by using a nice, oversize kimono-type garment made of heavy cotton-flannel or beacon-blanket material. This garment has extra long sleeves to come down over the hands, and extra long skirts to cover the feet. It buttons down the front as would any kimono.

With either of these garments the baby could stay awake after being changed and there would be no need to worry about his getting cold and miserable; nor for the mother to stay awake to cover him once he had fallen asleep.

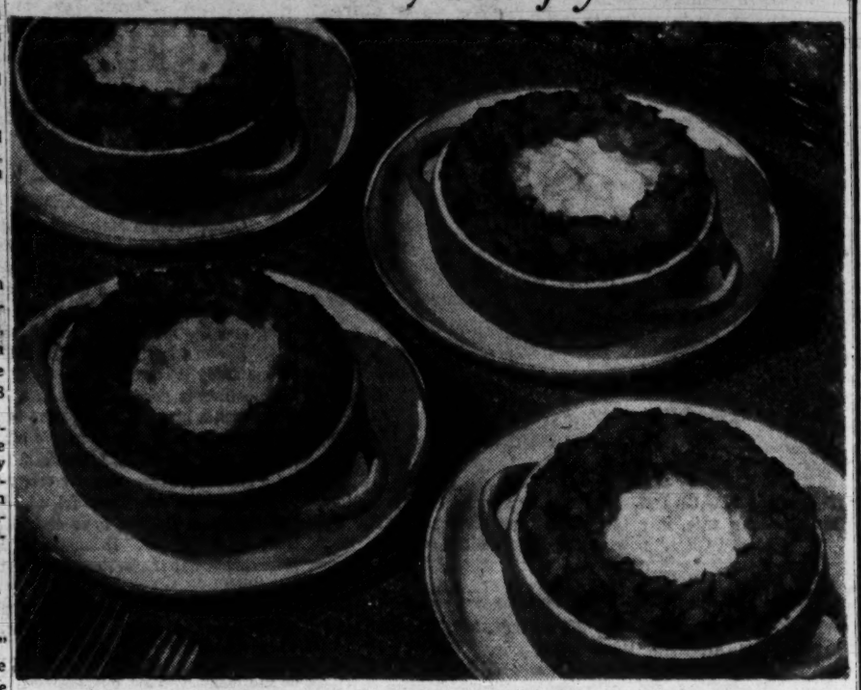
The Holidays Are Over

Let's Get Back on the Food Budget With These Plain, Thrifty Favorites



YOU'LL be serving plain food with a flourish if you have this kind of corned beef and cabbage for dinner! It's a version of the well-known shepherd's pie, made with creamed cabbage topped with a perky ring of corned beef hash

By Lucia Brown

GETTING just a little bit tired of rich holiday fare—and all those fancy food bills that go along with it?

Then let's talk about corned beef hash for a change, about stewing chickens and casserole dishes—in other words, plain and thrifty food that will help make up for a few of those dollars so gaily and freely lavished on Christmas delicacies. The family will be delighted to see some of their everyday favorites after all the elegant eating of the past 10 days, especially if old friends come decked out in 1948 dress.

Our three recipes for today feature different ways of serving well-known foods. They're all meat stretchers, too, keep you on the food conservation standard, as well as within your budget.

First on the list is a corned beef and creamed cabbage casserole. This variation on the well-known shepherd's pie has a savory corned beef hash topping and a creamy cabbage base. Use discretion in cooking the cabbage, for it is easily overcooked.

CORNED BEEF AND CABBAGE CASSEROLE

1 small head cabbage
2 cups seasoned medium white sauce
1 1-pound can corned beef hash

Cut cabbage coarsely (about 4 cups) and cook in boiling salted water for 5 minutes. Drain well. Combine with white sauce. Pour into greased casserole or four individual ones. Pile corned beef hash around the edges. Bake in a moderate over (375 degrees Fahrenheit) approximately 10 minutes or until hash is browned and heated through.

BAKED SQUASH WITH SAUSAGE LINKS

Delicious and thrifty dinner mainstay is this dish which requires only a half pound of sausage and two egg yolks. (The whites can be used at the same meal or next day in a prune whip.) Frozen, fresh or canned squash or almost any variety can be used in the recipe.

2½ tablespoons butter, melted
2 cups cooked squash
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
1¼ teaspoons salt
Dash of pepper
½ pound saussage links

Saute onion in 1 tablespoon butter until tender but not browned. Add to squash with egg yolks, remaining 1½ tablespoons butter, and seasonings. Turn into greased shallow baking pan, 8x4x3 inches. Separate link sausage. Prick each well with sharp-tined fork to prevent bursting during cooking. Place in hot skillet and cook 4 to 6 minutes. Arrange on squash. Place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 25 to 30 minutes. This recipe makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN STEW WITH PARSLEY DUMPLINGS

Plain old stewing chicken makes a de luxe appearance when it comes to the table accompanied by parsley dumplings. The recipe provides enough of this succulent dish to serve 6 persons:

4 to 5 pound fowl, cut up
3 stalks celery, chopped
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ quarts hot water
1 slice medium onion
Parsley dumplings

Combine all ingredients except dumplings. Simmer, covered, 3 to 4 hours, or until tender. Thicken stock if desired. Drop parsley dumplings on top of boiling stew and cook as directed.

PARSLEY DUMPLINGS

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup minced parsley
¼ cup shortening
1 egg slightly beaten
¾ cup milk

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. Combine egg with milk and add to dry ingredients. Mix only until all flour is dampened. Drop dumplings by spoonfuls on top of simmering chicken. Cover tightly. Steam for 12 to 15 minutes. Do not remove cover during steaming process. Serve immediately.

Labor Costs Are Higher
Raw Furs Are Higher Priced
What makes this JANUARY FUR SALE more significant than others?
It's been our tradition for many years to stage a January Sale. This year, such a sale bears a greater significance, because of the present market conditions. In the past few months raw furs and labor costs have risen sharply, bringing wholesale fur prices up. As manufacturers we carry large inventories of fine furs at all times and maintain our fur workrooms the year 'round. We can, therefore, offer you decided savings in January. A fine representation of our stock is included.

Jamestown Corp. Names Writer as Business Manager

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—Appointment of Allen R. Matthews, author and former staff writer for the Richmond Times-Dispatch, as business manager for the Jamestown Corporation was announced today by the corporation's executive committee.

Matthews, a native of Macon, Ga., will take over his new duties immediately, the committee announcement said.

In his new post, Matthews will be in charge of all business details connected with the Jamestown Corporation's historical drama, "The Common Glory," which made its debut last summer and will be presented again this year.

Matthews, a former marine and author of "The Assault," a book describing his experience in the attack on Iwo Jima, has made his home in Richmond since 1941 and is a graduate of Mercer University and the Colorado School of Mines.

'Dr.' Mason Can't Blame Writers

By Richard L. Coe

YOU WILL BE ENCHANTED to learn that in "The Upturned Glass," at the Metropolitan, James Mason pushes an annoying woman out of a window, stuffs her corpse into his car and performs an emergency operation on a child while the hidden carcass cools.

For so cold-blooded a trick, Mason is just the man. Unfortunately, "The Upturned Glass" is a bit too tricky for its own good, is overlong and the motivations of several of its characters are not credible. Mason's last British film thereby misses being the engrossing crime study it sought to be.

The idea is good. Mason is a hard-working Harley Street brain specialist, a brilliant man whose escape from loneliness into ill-fated romance leads him to conceive of a perfect crime, which he somehow botches, and thus brings him to self-destruction. It is the study of a madman whose insanity crops out by the merest chance.

As Mason's American friend, John P. Monaghan, and Mason's wife, Pamela Kellino, have chosen to unveil it, the doctor's story is told by flashbacks. Dramatically it is a defensible device, but in carrying it out the writers have not satisfactorily spliced their story together.

We first see Mason, as the respected brain specialist, lecturing to a classroom on criminal types. He tells the story of a doctor—and you are immediately shown that he is the man—who has devoted himself solely to his work. After performing a delicate operation on a child, the doctor slowly makes friends with her mother and falls in love with her. The woman's husband has been long abroad, but though she shares the doctor's emotion she is reluctant to be unfaithful.

"THE UPTURNED GLASS." Universal-International release for J. Arthur Rank, produced by Sidney Box and James Mason. Original story by John P. Monaghan, adapted to the screen by Monaghan and Pamela Kellino. Music by Bernard Stevens. Directed by Laurence Huntington. At the Metropolitan.

The Glass Is Shattered

The morning after they have decided not to see one another again the doctor learns of her death. She has fallen out of a window in what is evidently an accident. Present at the purely perfunctory inquest, he senses that there was more to the accident than appears. Gradually he convinces himself that his love was driven to suicide by her gossipy, grasping sister-in-law. Nothing can be proved, but his suspicions force him to lead the woman on with the idea he's in love with her. Finally, taking her to the fateful window, he pushes her out in revenge for his loss.

That much he tells his class. Actually he hasn't done the deed yet, and in pulling it off several unexpected crises arise. Before the film ends, another doctor has analyzed his paranoiac personality, likening it to a delicately carved but fragile glass which shatters at the first disturbance.

Such a story is inherently interesting, and to tell it the flashbacks were important. But that device, always a tricky one, is too labored here for full effect. Nor does the character of the married woman quite suggest a person who would destroy herself because of a sister-in-law with whose character she is fully acquainted. Nor would the servants have kept their mouths shut at the inquest.

That one has time to think of such criticisms is the weakness of the story, novel as it is. The character of the doctor, however, is a logical study and Mason is consistently effective in his portrayal.

Both Authors Have Roles

While too much time is spent picturing two operations, one of the subsidiary scenes is cleverly handled. This one is at a London cocktail party, one of those things at which hordes of people swap cliches with utter strangers. It's used here to bring the doctor and the sister-in-law together and affords several genuinely amusing moments.

Besides the dark brooding Mason, who, by the way, smiles once in a while when the love affair is at its happiest, the cast includes Rosamund John and the busy Miss Kellino.

In a role which recalls Celia Johnson's in "Brief Encounter," Miss John makes a handsome appearance, though the suicide the script calls for hardly makes sense. Miss Kellino, as the sister-in-law, does the role with appropriate distaste. It's unimportant, but several of the scenes catch her looking as unkempt as her husband, a man with a fine disregard for a 5 o'clock shadow.

The other coauthor, by the way, John Monaghan, makes a brief appearance as a fogbound American truck driver.

Md.-Va. Authority Proposed As Solution for Oyster Row

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 1 (AP).—A new proposal has been advanced to end the Maryland-Virginia fish and oyster dispute that has flared intermittently since colonial times.

A Chesapeake-Potomac Commission report released today recommends a "Maryland-Virginia Chesapeake Authority" be set up to increase and maintain seafood production in the bay and the Potomac River.

The study group, with representatives from the two States, unanimously recommended creating the authority to have full power over:

1. Fin fishing and crabbing in the Chesapeake Bay and all its tributaries in Maryland and Virginia.

2. Rehabilitating oyster production in the Potomac River.

The authority would be financed jointly by Maryland and Virginia.

The recommendations were made after months of study by the commission of differences between the States, including methods of taking oysters in the Potomac and fish and crabs in the bay.

Created by Legislators

The commission was created by resolutions of the General Assemblies of Maryland and Virginia.

The 27-page report, submitted to Governors Lane of Maryland and Tuck of Virginia, says, "it is generally agreed that the control of the oyster industry in the two States outside the Potomac and its tributaries is a matter for each State to manage . . ."

The commission reported "fisheries in the Chesapeake Bay are producing now about one-half the volume attained 40 years ago."

The commission made no specific suggestions regarding the crab industry, but recommended that regulations for the management of the species should be made by the joint authority.

Many Powers Suggested

The report suggested the joint authority have power to manage fishing, crabbing and oystering in the Potomac River, to fix seasons, specify gears, regulate sizes of gears and length of nets, strengthen the cull law, control the taking of seed oysters, issue licenses, open and close areas, carry on shell and seed plantings by a direct appropriation from the two States with power to make charges to recover cost of oyster and shell planting, and to make practical oystermen and fishermen of both States aware of the meaning of greater production and more stable industry through progressive conservation measures.

Along with the regulatory authority, the commission favored launching a complete program of fishery research "so that the administrators will have the facts on which to base their decisions."

The commission recommended specifically that oysters not be taken in the Potomac before October 15 instead of September 15 as at present.

Serving on the commission were C. O'Conor Gollrick, chairman of Fredericksburg, Va.; Robert H. Archer, vice chairman, Bel Air, Md.; Tayloe Murphy, Warsaw, Va., William Hilgenberg, Baltimore; William W. Williams of Colonial Beach, Va., and F. C. W. Webb of Salisbury, Md.

David H. Wallace, executive secretary of the Maryland Tidewater Fisheries Commission, served as secretary.

Conservation Methods Gain In Md. County

Increased emphasis on soil conservation by Prince William County farmers is shown by the 1947 report of County Agent Frank D. Cox.

Work of the local Soil Conservation District program, started in 1946, has led to the adoption, Cox said, of many new methods to aid in preserving rich top soil.

Among the year's activities, he listed: (1) Tours to demonstrations of strip cropping, grassland farming, ditch blasting and farm pond projects. An increasing number of county farmers are introducing these methods on their own farms.

2. Increasing use of bulldozers for soil conservation purposes.

3. Gradual switch from straight superphosphate to 0-14-17 fertilizer for use on pastures, and generally heavier application of fertilizer.

4. Increase in the acreage planted to alfalfa and ladino clover.

5. Distribution of soil maps and farm plans.

Md. Stream Pollution Law To Be Studied

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 1 (AP).—The Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission will discuss a proposed regulation to outlaw new sources of polluting streams when the group meets January 9 at Baltimore.

The meeting will be held at the office of Dr. Robert H. Riley, head of the department of health.

An opinion of Assistant Attorney Joseph D. Buscher dealing with application of the regulation will be discussed.

The commission's antipollution program for canneries will be up for discussion also at the session. Paul W. McKee, executive secretary, will present a report on questionnaires distributed by the commission.

Canneries have been asked to eliminate any contributions to streams polluting during 1948.

Week of Prayer To Start Monday In BerkeleyCounty

Martinsburg, W. Va. — The Annual Week of Prayer Services, sponsored by the Berkeley County Ministerial Association, will start Monday, in the Martinsburg First Presbyterian Church.

Visiting pastors who will conduct services during the week are: Monday, Rev. Walter E. Lepp, Grace Church of the Brethren, Hagerstown, Md.; Tuesday, Rev. William F. Wright, superintendent, Hagerstown district of Methodist Church; Wednesday, Rev. Floyd L. Fulk, superintendent, Virginia Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church, Broadway, Va..

Thursday, Rev. Harry M. Crim, First Presbyterian Church, Strasburg, Va.; Friday, Rev. William J. Lineback, secretary, Capital Area of the Christian Missionary Society, Washington.

Mrs. Mattingly Heads Homemakers Club

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 1 (Spl.). The Homemakers Club of western Charles County, including the Indian Head district, today named Mrs. William Mattingly its president for 1948. The other officers are treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Gray; chairman of all committees, Mrs. Frank McCullum; hostess, Mrs. Harry Anderson; special Roosevelt Ball committee, Mrs. Chris Lancaster.

Virginia to Seek More Business In Summer Camps

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—The Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, noting that Virginia loses some $250,000 a year or more to other States because of a lack of summer camps, announced today that it would issue shortly a new edition of its directory of such recreational facilities in the State.

"The development of lakes in the mountainous regions of the State with clear water favorable to fishing, swimming and boating would give the Old Dominion an opportunity to develop a large and prosperous summer camp business," said Verbon E. Kemp, the chamber's executive secretary.

Va. Youth Council To Meet Tomorrow

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 1.—The annual meeting of the United Christian Youth Council of Virginia will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Evangelical United Brethren Church here.

Among out-of-State leaders who will participate in the conference are the Rev. Clarence N. Crawford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, D. C., and Miss Helen Spaulding, associate director of youth work for the International Council of Religious Education. The program will include a business meeting, banquet and informal entertainment at the homes of local youth council members in the evening.

Falls Church Moves to Curb Auto Accidents

Alarmed by a recent upswing in traffic accidents involving children, a three-man Falls Church safety committee will meet with local civic bodies January 16 to tackle the problem.

The move followed a petition by the Southwest Falls Church (Civic) Association asking the Town Council for "effective action to protect the children of this area" from "careless and reckless" drivers.

Within 15 hours on December 18 and 19, there were three accidents in Falls Church in which six children were injured, one seriously.

Following presentation of the civic group's petition, the Town Council named Councilman Walter Follon and J. C. McRae and Town Manager Roy Dunn to the special safety committee.

Mass Meeting Planned

According to Dunn, the trio hopes to discuss the safety problem at a mass meeting January 16, probably at the Odd Fellows Hall. Invited are local P-TA, Women's club, civic and business group members who want to take action.

In its petition, the Southwest Association asked for more traffic warning signs, more rigid police safety enforcement and patrolling, and also suggested:

1. Parking on one side of the street only in residential areas to give motorists a greater range of vision.

2. Construction of deep, sloping gutters across street intersections to serve both as a slow-down to motorists and as storm sewers.

Safety Committee Proposed

3. Establishment of a town safety and fire prevention committee to be made up of leading citizens, town officials, and local businessmen.

4. The addition of part or full time policemen to the Falls Church force to enable it to give better coverage to dangerous intersections.

Police pointed out that the intersection of W. Broad and Spring sts. was unguarded by a police when four school children were struck there by a car January 19. Town Manager Dunn said the present police budget does not permit enough policemen to cover adequately all bad crossings in Falls Church.

New Section Of Route 60 Is Widened

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—Completion of the widening of a section of U. S. Route 60 through Providence Forge between Richmond and Williamsburg was announced today by the State Highway Department.

Hechler Brothers of Richmond, contractor on the Providence Forge section, finished the job almost three months ahead of schedule. This brings to completion more than 12 miles of divided four-lane pavement between the old and new Capitals of the State.

The Highway Department also said another project now under way is expected to be opened to traffic within the next several weeks, adding 4½ miles more to the divided highway and completing the pavement at the west end of Bottoms Bridge to Providence Forge.

Still remaining to be let to contract to complete the Richmond-Toana widening of the old road is a section of about 4 miles between Providence Forge and Toana.

Former Representative Seeks Senate Seat

By The Associated Press

Former Democratic Representative Frank E. Hook announced yesterday his candidacy for the Senate seat now held by Homer Ferguson, Michigan's junior Republican Senator.

Hook, whose home is Ironwood, Mich., has served five terms in the House and was the first Democrat elected from the State's Twelfth Congressional District. He was defeated for reelection in 1946.

Ferguson, whom Hook referred to as "the great snooper," will complete his first term at the end of 1948.

Byrd Airport Readies New Approach Lights

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—Airport approach ground lights operated by radio remote control are being readied for operation at Byrd Airport, CAA Airways Maintenance Technician C. D. Tait said today.

The neon tubes that light a path into the field in soupy weather may be operated by the control tower without the use of a direct control cable. Tait believes the installation to be the first of its type.

Tait said the control system would be ready for operation about March 1.

Wisconsin Ave. Project Gets Md. Approval

A major obstacle to the long awaited elimination of the traffic bottleneck on Wisconsin ave. in Bethesda, Md. was apparently hurdled after State and local officials gave a go-ahead signal to the proposed street widening project.

The Maryland State Roads Commission agreed on the procedure of acquiring a right-of-way, if Montgomery County pays for it.

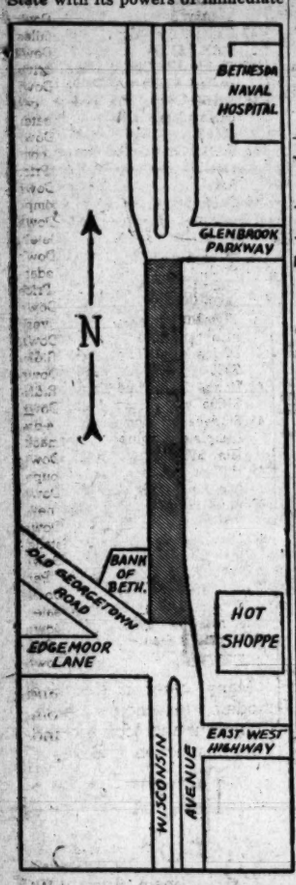
Plans for the widening of Wisconsin ave. from East-West hwy. to the Naval Hospital by the State Roads Commission soon after the project was first proposed more than a year ago.

Rights of Way Held Up

But, officials explained yesterday, a few property owners have halted the project by refusing to give land for the right of way.

The State Roads Commission approval was contingent upon Montgomery County acquiring the rights of way. This, county officials found, was "practically impossible" due to the local government's limited legal staff to handle the necessary condemnation proceedings.

Under the new agreement, the State with its powers of immediate condemnation and large legal staff will proceed wit acquiring the rights of way, with Montgomery County repaying the State from county gasoline tax receipts. Cost of the actual construction will be borne by the State.



Also planned is redesigning of the three-way intersection at Wisconsin ave., Old Georgetown rd. and East-West hwy.

At a meeting Wednesday between the State Road Commission and county officials, Montgomery County Commission President Brooke Johns asked State commission also to widen Georgia ave. from Colesville rd. to Wheaton, Md. He said the Georgia ave. bottleneck is "as bad if not worse than that on Wisconsin ave."

County Supervisor Irving G. McNayr said yesterday the SRC had declined to discuss the Johns' proposal pending outcome of a conference next week between State road and Federal Works Agency officials. An attempt will be made at that meeting by State officials to obtain Federal funds for road improvements in Maryland areas near Washington.

Another Georgia ave. project, the redesigning of the Colesville rd. and Georgia ave. intersection, was approved at the meeting, and the State Commission also agreed to take over and improve River rd. from Piney Meeting House rd. to Travilah rd., a distance of about 4 miles. The plan includes erection of a new bridge over Muddy Branch at a cost of between $40,000 and $50,000, McNavr said.

Farewell Gift . . .

AFTER 16 YEARS—Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg (right) hands a gift from county employes to Lawrence Douglas, Arlington Commonwealth's Attorney who left his office after 16 years of service. The ceremony, attended by county workers and friends of Douglas, took place in Arlington Circuit Courtroom. The gift was a desk set and blotter. Douglas is retiring to private law practice

Williamsburg Restoration To Be Resumed

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—The trustees of Colonial Williamsburg have authorized resumption of the building program interrupted by the war.

Kenneth Chorley, president of the organization formed by John D. Rockefeller, jr., said today completion of the project would take from 5 to 10 years and cost more than 10 million dollars.

The board of trustees authorized work for the next two years. Construction is expected to start in two weeks, according to Chorley.

Work in the Duke of Gloucester st. area in 1948 calls for: Reconstruction of the guard house at the public magazine, extensive rehabilitation of the structure known as Debtor's Prison, reconstruction of the kitchen at the Lightfoot House, the Russell House and the Craig House near Raleigh Tavern.

A second phase calls for restoration at other properties on Duke of Glouchester st., Francis st. and Palace Green.

The restoration of this capital of Virginia before the Revolutionary War was begun by Rockefeller 20 years ago.

All Quiet on 25th Day Of Fairlington Strike

All was quiet on the Fairlington strike front yesterday, as the strike there of AFL building service employes ended its twenty-fifth day.

Nathiel Smith, owner of Super Service Trash Co., which has contracted to haul trash from the strikebound apartment development, said he had 23 men on the job during the day.

Gov. Lane to Speak Over WTOP Sunday

Baltimore, Jan. 1 (AP).—The Maryland Department of State Forests and Parks announced today Governor Lane would be a guest speaker on a forest conservation program to be broadcast Sunday at 9:30 a. m., over Washington Radio Station WTOP.

Newly Elected School Board 'Joins' Old One

Arlington County's new five-man school board will hold its first meeting tonight to organize and elect a chairman, vice chairman and clerk. The meeting will be held at James Monroe School, 2300 Key blvd., at 8 p. m.

The board, taking office yesterday, will act jointly with the old board in all official matters, pending a court ruling on the new board's legal status.

Visiting Circuit Court Judge J. Garland Jefferson is now considering charges brought by old board members that the act providing popular election of the board is unconstitutional. The new board was elected under this act, passed by the Legislature last year.

Old board member Harry W. Porter said there will probably be no need for joint action until the last Tuesday in January when pay vouchers must be signed. Signatures of chairmen and clerks of both must appear on these vouchers until Judge Jefferson has handed down his decision.

Both boards will have access to all necessary records and documents, and neither will draw pay while they await the court's decision.

Milk Price Boost Is Requested in Covington Area

Richmond, Va., Jan. 1 (AP).—The State Milk Commission announced today that a request for another increase in minimum prices for milk on the Covington-Clifton Forge market will be heard here at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The present price on the market for 4 per cent milk is $5.90 per hundredweight to producers and 20 cents per quart retail. These prices became effective on October 26. The new increase was requested because, of the continued rising costs of labor, feed and other things involved in the milk business.

No specific amount of increase was asked in the petition.

Cab License Crackdown Fails to Jell

A scheduled "crackdown" on Montgomery County cab drivers operating without licenses yesterday resulted in a lot of confusion but no arrests.

Public Utilities Agent Albert E. Conradis had requested police cooperation in enforcement of the ordinance, but the police failed to act.

At least one firm, the Piney Branch Cab Co., was openly defiant of a provision of the ordinance which was enacted last July, that a $25 annual license fee be paid for all cabs and a $10 annual fee for all drivers.

Head of the defiant cab company, Robert H. Swisher, said of the ordinance: "In my opinion, it is nothing but a bunch of politics all rolled up into a three-ring circus."

Asked why police had failed to begin enforcement of the ordinance yestrday, Police Chief Charles M. Orme called it the responsibility of the hack inspector, not the police. He said he had so informed Conradis.

A majority of the more than 300 cab drivers in the county were abiding by the ordinance, however, Conradis reported. He said he had sent out aproximately 225 permits to those who applied.

The ordinance has experienced tough sledding.

When Bethesda cab firms bitterly opposed the rate and zone provision, it was amended by the commissioners.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

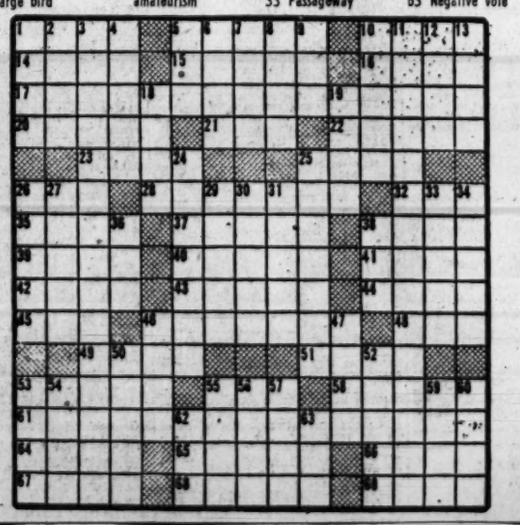
Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle



BARNABY

Barnaby loves the room you put him in, Minerva. Those cute little double bunks—
Did he sleep in the lower one?
Yes, I slept in the lower bunk, Aunt Minerva—
Oh, good morning, Barnaby.
Mr. O'Malley, my Fairy Godfather, slept in the top one. He got back late last night and he left early this morning.
Nonsense.
Ellen, look! Both bunks have been slept in! . . .

Sign Item Leads to Annual Hint For Florida Trip

Lena Bartolomeo of 5513 Illinois ave. nw. found this sign in the window of the J. P. Hughes Co., which sells tackers and staplers:

"There is nothing in this store that anyone would want for a Christmas gift—so Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!"

Esta R. Benson of 5020 2d st. nw. recalls that on the road from Las Vegas, N. Mex., to Boulder Dam there's a sign which says:

"Visit the Boulder Hotel—the best by a Dam site."

And at the bottom of Oak Creek Canyon, between the Grand Canyon and Phoenix, there is a tiny cabin which its owner has named "Bedside Manor."

Mrs. Benson says that she'll send in a few more humorous sign items, but first she's going to Florida to check on the exact wording.

(Dear Boss: Your rule that every fact be checked at the source leads me to wonder—are we going to take Mrs. Benson's word for these sign items, or would you like to assign me to Miami for a first-hand investigation?)

MAGIC PITCHER

If I were treasurer of the Capital Transit Co., I think that along about now I'd begin to wonder where all the tokens were coming from.

Today's mail brings additional contributions for Children's Hospital from M. E. Huston of Hamptop, Va., A. William Croft of 1434 Harvard st. nw., Helen McHenry of 1631 Monroe st. nw. (cash enclosed), Marie M. Bartolomeo of 5513 Illinois ave. nw., and George R. Vallowe, who keeps finding the little disks on the floor at Murphy's.

Jack Daiker of 140 Tennessee ave. ne. sends in a little jingle which explains how friendships end. It goes: "Hi ya, friends, will ya lend? Sorry friend, that's the end."

And just to show that he's only kidding about being that close with his moola, Jack encloses a check for $25 for Children's Hospital.

Here are some more previously unacknowledged contributors:

Mrs. James W. Baldwin, 5501 Lincoln st., Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. William C. Boese, 7025 Wilson lane, Bethesda, Md.; S. M. Z., 5211 Chevy Chase pkwy.; Mrs. George A. Barnett, 507 E. Luray ave., Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Russell A. White, 3647 Minnesota ave. se.

Mrs. Richard Lee Clinkenbeard, 5441 Chevy Chase pkwy.; Sergt. R. C. Young, 2460 S. Scott st., Arlington, Va.; Y. A. K.; M. P. Chaplin; the folks in Apartment 502 at 127 C street; Mrs. Lorentz E. Wigby, 5040 New Hampshire ave. nw.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Is it true that the celebration of New Year's Eve was first promoted as an advertising stunt by the Bromo Seltzer people?

ADD NAMES

The lists of strange place names have grown so long that there isn't enough room to print them all.

Lieut. Ede Roberts of 2107 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va., writes: "Notrees is in Texas, and if you'd see the place you'd understand why they named it as they did."

Another appropriate name is Concrete, Wash. Andrew R. Allaways of the U. S. Naval Air Station at Patuxent, Md., explains that Concrete is the site of a Portland cement factory.

H. W. Wiley of 2345 Ashmead pl. nw. says that West Virginia is his favorite State for names. By way of example, he cites these towns:

Peru, Rio, Cairo, Volga, Yukon, Congo, Athens, Ireland, Killarney, Oxford and Ghent.

Charles D. Lee of 1725 29th st. se. is partial to Eight Mile, Ala., but Capt. W. C. O'Kelley of 34 Monticello rd., Alexandria, Va., offers a very valuable collection from Texas. In the Lone Star State you'll find:

Earth, Clay, Mud (ask any former GI), Carbon, Mercury, Nickel, Radium, Gasoline, and Gold.

Lemonville is in Orange County—and Ding Dong is in Bell County.

STUCK—WITHOUT PASTE

A charming young secretary of my acquaintance was transcribing some shorthand notes the other day when she came to "tooth paste." Addressing her co-workers, she asked:

"Is tooth paste one word, two words, or hyphenated?"

"It's two words," replied one girl.

"I think it's hyphenated," said another.

"I'd be willing to bet it's one word," maintained the secretary. "I'm sure I've seen it that way on tubes of the stuff."

By this time one of the other girls had looked it up, and found that tooth paste was listed as two words. Unwilling to accept that decision, the secretary resolved to check on it.

On arriving home that evening, she made a bee-line to the medicine cabinet, grabbed for the tube which lay beside her toothbrush, and read the label. It said:

"Colgate's Dental Cream."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Six months ago, when John Gunther's "Inside U. S. A." was published, the book reviewer for Henry Luce's Time magazine predicted that the book would be forgotten at the end of the year. Today 700,000 copies of the book are in circulation. It sold more copies than any other $5 book in publishing history. It's being made into a musical, and has been sold for film adaptation. The President and 50 Senators have alluded to it in print. It's been translated into seven foreign languages. Every public library in America has acquired a copy. Copies also have been bought by 41 American universities, with Harvard buying 60 copies, Columbia 55, Cornell 40, Princeton 35. Luce's alma mater, Yale, bought none.

Because of the blizzard Helen Hayes tried reaching her theater by subway. It's the first time in long years that she rode a subway. She wound up at 137th st. and reached the theater 15 minutes late.

Every songwriter in town will attend Frankie Carle's opening at the Pennsylvania on Monday for they rate him one of the prime plugs in the industry.

Some of the many Congressmen who toured Europe last summer will get up a symposium on what is wrong with our foreign service, and recommend changes to meet our world responsibilities. They'll ask for the elimination of embassy men who are only "cookie-pushers."

When Ed Pauley testified in Washington regarding his dealings in grain, he spent the first hour on the stand reading his statement and answering all questions about the extent of his investments. Someone suddenly sent a note to Senator Bridges, who was chairman of the session. "It's been called to my attention," said Senator Bridges, "that the witness hasn't been sworn" . . . Pauley therefore was sworn in. Then Senator O'Mahoney asked him: "Does the oath cover what the witness has said, or what he will say?" . . . "I hereby take another oath," Pauley assured the committee, "that it covers everything I've said and will say."

Tallulah Bankhead's recent illness hasn't affected her ebullience. Glenn Hunter reported: "I just spent an hour talking to Tallulah a few minutes."

When George Jessel's assistant, Selden Bennett, tried to dissuade him from taking another drink, Jessel told him: "You are the toothache in my conscience."

Some New Year Greetings

By Drew Pearson

Rome (by wireless).—I hear that some editors are bored with having me say nice things about people and think it's about time I began punching noses again. Despite that, however, I'm going to start the new year by saying something else nice about a few people.

Maj. Gen. Eddy

In fact, I want to rectify a couple of injustices. Shortly before I left home I wrote a column referring to Army promotions in which I pointed to the fact that Gen. Manton S. Eddy, though only a major general, had been promoted over the heads of several well-known lieutenant generals, the inference being that he was promoted because he was in charge of Army press relations. This inference, I am now convinced, was wrong. While the Army does attach great importance to its press relations, General Eddy also had a great combat record and his promotion was not at all out of line with this fine record.

And while I am getting things off my chest, one diplomat I have criticized a lot in the past is Jimmy Dunn, now United States Ambassador to Italy. Regardless of the past, I have watched Jimmy work close up in Rome and there's no question but that he's an A-1 Ambassador. He knows Italian psychology, has been tireless in promoting the right kind of friendship between the United States and Italy, and has proved himself the kind of representative the United States can be proud of. Though Jimmy Dunn comes from the opposite side of the railroad tracks from the present Italian government, he has worked most sympathetically to straighten out their problems. We could use more like him in other countries.

How to Prevent War

There was something quite touching about the ceremony of unloading the first Italian Friend Ship Train in the bombed-out City of Naples. There were piles of rubble on one side, gutted buildings on the other and old German bomb shelters in front. And around the dock were Italian school children, crowding, waving flags and shouting "Viva America!"

Up above the harbor, scarcely discernible through the clouds, towered Mount Vesuvius. In the harbor itself a crew of 400 stevedores had worked all day Sunday to unload the ship and stevedores aren't easily persuaded to work on Sundays in this part of the world. The cheering children, the grim, bombed-out buildings all seemed like a new Italy smiling and struggling to lift itself out of the tragic blunders of the past.

I couldn't help but remember as I watched the crowd that it was only two brief years ago that the United States and Italy were at war and that if, despite the bitterness of war, people can get together with people and help each other as Americans are now helping the people of Italy, then maybe that's one very important way to prevent war in the future.

In the Soviet Soup

In Italy, which is almot cheek and jowl with Tito, they make a specialty of sizing up Moscow's next moves. They have to. For if they guess wrong they may be in the Soviet soup.

The Russian Politburo, claim the Moscow specialists, believes in shifting strategy. When it fails with one move, it makes a lightning change to another. Thus, when the Truman Plan was adopted and United States advisers and money poured into Greece, Moscow answered by suddenly shifting to Hungary. There it kicked out the anti-Communist, freely elected government and set up a puppet government of its own.

Next, Moscow strategy centered on France and Italy and those countries were given a hot dose of politically inspired strikes. When this strategy failed, Moscow shifted —only last week—back to Greece. Obviously, the Communist republic of Greece is going to get most of Moscow's attention for a while, and the United States is going to be the recipient of all sorts of resultant headaches. But simultaneously the Soviet experts also predict that shenanigans are brewing in Austria. "Just how soon the Russians will move to set up their own puppet government in their part of Austria is only a guess, but it's sure to come fairly soon. The gentlemen in Moscow believe in versatility.

Orlando Toasts U. S.

Sprightly, 87-year-old former Premier Vittorio Orlando, Italian delegate to the 1918 Peace Conference and revered elder statesman of Italy, proposed a toast to the United States and the Friendship Train.

"Friendship," he said at a private dinner, "is different from love. Love sometimes goes back on you, is not always reciprocated. But friendship never.

"And the United States," he continued, "never goes back on you. When American troops came to France in 1917, some Allied officers looked at them and remarked that they could not stand up in battle. But they won the war.

"Later," said Orlando, "I was in New York with Colonel House and we passed the George Washington Bridge. I was amazed at its length and height.

"'Oh,' replied Colonel House, 'we will build a better one.' And not only have you built bigger and better bridges, but when the American Army came back to Europe in this last war it was far, far better than the Army of 1917-18.

"So," concluded the 87-year-old Italian statesman. "Here's to American friendship—you can always rely on it and it gets better with every year."

Arlington's Fiscal Aides Top State List

Arlington has been allotted more money than any other county in Virginia for salaries and expenses of its commissioner of revenue and treasurer in 1948.

The State Compensation Board announced yesterday it had approved $63,940.50 for the commissioner of revenue and $64,550 for the county treasurer.

Alexandria will receive $7150 for the commissioner of revenue's salary and $30,866.50 for his expenses. For the treasurer, the board approved $6500 for salary and $15,680 for expenses.

Richmond led the cities with a commissioner of revenue and $72,180.30 for treasurer.

The two groups of officials covered by the board's report are paid in part by the State and in part by the localities.

The total of $2,628,304.46 approved for all counties and cities for revenue commissioners and $1,426,021.69 for treasurers. Of the sum allowed the commissioners of revenue, $464,925 was for salaries and $737,357.77 for expenses. The total allowance for treasurers included $553,637 for salaries and $872,384.69 for expenses.

The Arlington breakdown: commissioner of revenue, $8000 for salary and $55,940.50 for expenses; treasurer, $8000 for salary and $53,550 for expenses.

Fairfax won approval for $7500 for the commissioner of revenue's salary and $30,860 for expenses and $7500 for treasurer's salary and $24,945 for his expenses.

Two Policemen Added

Winchester, Va., Jan. 1.—The Winchester Police Department has been brought to full strength with the appointment of two new members, according to Chief J. Thomas Boyd. The new officers, both of whom were given probationary appointments, are Wilmer Comer and Maurice Lake.

My dreams

Not all the dreams that fill my heart . . . Are those I dream at night . . . But some of them are born when I . . . Behold the morning light . . . And some of them endure the day . . . Until the sun goes down . . . And silver stars surround the moon . . . To give the night a crown . . . Because I dream of everything . . . And everyone I know . . . Including all the little songs . . . That simply come and go . . . I dream about the yesteryears . . . And what there is today . . . And what tomorrow will be like . . . When time has run away . . . I dream of youth and greener grass . . . The silent sky above . . . And most of all the only one . . . With whom I am in love.
